Hershey Will See President On Drafting 18-Year-Olds

Roosevelt Refuses To Take Stand on Move; Showdown Today on $50 Pay

By Philip G. Reed
International News Service Staff Writer

President Roosevelt revealed late yesterday that the question of drafting youths 18 and 19 years of age into the armed forces will be taken up in a few days.

The President said he expected to confer shortly with Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, Selective Service director, on the possibility of asking Congress to make the necessary change in the Selective Service Act.

Teen-age youths are now exempt from military service under the act, but must register along with older men for the national man power inventory. Their registration has been set for June 30.

Reticent on Hershey's Statement

The President told his press conference that he has personally taken no position on the proposal to lower military age bars. Nor, he said, have any such recommendations been made to him.

He declined comment on General Hershey's recent statement that boys of 18 would probably have to be called to service.

First official revelation that the Administration is weighing a call to duty for the Nation's "under 20" group, the President's statement came on the heels of a move by the Senate Military Affairs Committee to lighten the financial load for men already in service.

The committee voted to pay cash allowances for families of men in the Army and Navy and to arrange $10,000 life insurance at half cost for every man in the armed forces.

Insurance Would Be Mandatory

The action came on the eve of an election-tinged showdown in the House over demands to raise soldier-sailor pay from $21 to $50 a month, instead of the $42 voted by the Senate.

The committee bill also would provide $28 a month for the wife of a soldier or sailor; $40 for a wife and one child, and $10 for each ad-

President Suggests July 4 Display On Potomac

President Roosevelt turned impresario yesterday and suggested a Fourth of July celebration for Washington in which fireworks would bet set off from a barge in the middle of the Potomac River.

The President further suggested that the United States Marine Band be placed on another barge and that it play patriotic songs and marches amid the rockets' red glare.

Mr. Roosevelt made his suggestions at his regular Tuesday press conference. He said he had received a letter from District Commissioner J. Russell Young, asking his advice about the annual fireworks show near the Washington Monument.

Commissioner Young put the matter up to President Roosevelt because he thought there might be some concern this year over Washington's greatly enlarged population and the possibility of danger to the new tempos in Potomac Park.

The President, in suggesting barges for the fireworks and for the band, said that this was the way they staged pyrotechnic shows in Europe.

Commissioner Young said later that he thought the President's idea an excellent one, and he would go ahead on that basis.

Flagstaff Stores To Protest Union Drive by Closing

Flagstaff, Ariz., May 26 (AP).—Flagstaff merchants agreed today to close their stores for an indefinite period as a protest against attempts by American Federation of Labor organizers to unionize employes.

Joseph C. Donald, president of the Arizona Lumber and Timber Co. spokesman for the merchants, said all retail establishments, including grocery stores, garages and service stations, would close tonight and stay closed until the controversy was settled.

He added "it might become necessary to call in the Federal Government to act as mediator" but said the situation hadn't gone that far yet.

For 5 Million Men

45 Billion Army Bill Nears Action

Congress last night was awaiting a record 1943 Army bill expected to smash all previous estimates of its size and hit the 45 billion dollar mark at least.

The unsurpassed military outlays would be included in the regular War Department appropriation bill, to be rushed to passage with the last of the regular supply bills before the July 1 end of this fiscal year.

The bill was originally slated to reach the Capitol around May 24, but has been held up to allow for every forseeable need of an Army of five million men in 1943, it was said.

The previous single war appropriation record was held by the big 33 billion dollar supplemental defense measure which cleared Congress early in March. First forecasts placed the size of the regular war department appropriation at around 35 billion dollars, but since then the sights have been raised.

In one quarter it was estimated that 10 billion dollars alone would

Lewis Breaks With 'Former Friend' Murray

Dramatic Debate Over Union Funds Leads to Personalities

By Joseph A. Loftus
Associated Press Staff Writer

John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, made his estrangement from Philip Murray official yesterday with a reference to the C. I. O. chief as "my former friend" at a dramatic meeting of the policy committee.

Murray was emotionally overcome twice in replying, witnesses said. He told the packed meeting, which was closed to the press, that of all the unpleasantness that has developed he was hurt most by Lewis' reference to their friendship as "former."

Debate Over Loan

Murray, who still is vice president of the mine workers, said if Lewis felt that way he was sorry and did not know what could be done about it. Afterward neither would comment on the personal nature of his own or the other's remarks, but it was learned officially that they held the floor exclusively at a meeting which lasted more than three hours.

The formal subject of their debate was the money which the United Mine Workers advanced from its treasury to the C. I. O. A printed report made by Secretary-Treasurer Thomas Kennedy cited financial aid to the C. I. O. of varying kinds, aggregating $5,569,303. This included $1,665,000 which Lewis said was a negotiated loan now owing the United Mine Workers.

May Ask Repayment

Murray authorized a brief statement on that point. "I told the meeting today," he said, "that I expected to study the (financial) statement and have a categorical reply made to it in due course; that we were having a meeting of the executive board of the C. I. O. on June 3, at which time we expected the United Mine Workers' representatives to be there for the purpose of discussing not only this question but plans designed to bring

All U. S. Faces Gas Ration to Save Rubber

Tires for Civilians Are Unlikely Soon; Government May Buy All Extras

Convinced that civilians can hope for no new rubber for the next two years, at least, Administration officials last night were favorably considering a plan, just submitted by the Office of Defense Transportation, for Nation-wide rationing of gasoline to conserve tires.

Donald M. Nelson, chairman of the War Production Board, to which the plan was submitted by Joseph B. Eastman, transportation director, said the WPB had considered the proposal at its meeting late yesterday but expressed doubt that it could be put into effect by July 1, the date on which the East's permanent gasoline rationing begins.

"It looks like rationing of gasoline is the simplest method of allocating the use of cars," Nelson added.

Prospects Still Dark

The statement came at the end of a series of developments connected with the intensifying rubber shortage, none of which tended to alleviate materially the dark prospects facing motorists throughout the country.

Earlier yesterday the Senate defense investigating committee, headed by Senator Truman of Missouri, filed a report critical of numerous officials in connection with the rubber crisis and warning even the Army and Navy to practice conservation lest they "find themselves without rubber in some future time."

During the day, also, Ralph K. Davies, deputy petroleum administrator, told the House Interstate Commerce Committee that the rubber supply situation is "critical" and forecast national gasoline rationing to conserve tires.

Outlook Not Pleasant

Meanwhile it was revealed in Detroit that Mr. Roosevelt had written to Mayor Edward J. Jeffries of that city, in reply to the mayor's request for clarification of the rubber situation:

"The outlook is not a pleasant one, for it appears that virtually no rubber can be made available for any purposes which are not directly connected with the war effort."

His letter said a campaign was in preparation to tell the people the facts concerning the situation, which "I hope, will serve to diminish greatly any skepticism that may be entertained in any quarters as to the seriousness of the rubber shortage."

President Roosevelt, at his press conference, confined his comment

WAAC Recruiting To Begin Today

Washington recruiting for the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps was scheduled to start at 8 o'clock this morning.

Application blanks, which were to arrive last night, had not been received, and officials of the Baltimore recruiting headquarters promised they would be in this morning's mail.

Sergt. P. J. DiFazio, officer in charge of recruiting, will be on hand with four assistants until 5 p. m. at Eleventh Street and New York Avenue Northwest, to handle the volunteers.

WPB Regrets Premature Disclosure

Reasonable Time Promised Stores to Adjust Inventories

To clarify the situation which has arisen as a result of WPB's consideration of proposals to limit inventories of wholesale and retail dealers, WPB Chairman Donald M. Nelson yesterday sent the following letter to Lew Hahn, general manager and treasurer, National Retail Dry Goods Association, and to Dr. David R. Craig, president, American Retail Federation:

"The War Production Board regrets the confusion in the retail trade resulting from an unauthorized publication of a first draft of a proposal to limit inventories of retail and wholesale establishments.

"It was recognized that the first draft of the proposed plan, which was merely the preliminary thinking of one individual, would work severe hardships on many firms and unduly disturb the normal flow of goods into the hands of the public, and there was no intent of issuing this order in that form.

"We believe that wholesalers and retailers should have reasonable opportunity to bring their inventories into line without serious disorder. Before any official action is taken, representatives of retailers and wholesalers will be called into consultation.

"Retailers and wholesalers should avoid making panic decisions in an effort to anticipate a regulation which will not be issued for a number of weeks and will not become operative for several months thereafter. They should conduct their business in a manner which will bring their inventories to reasonable working minimums in accordance with Priorities Regulation No. 1 as rapidly as is consistent with the possibility of doing so in an orderly, businesslike fashion.

"It would be appreciated if you would advise the membership of your federation to this effect."

Nazis Face Softening Up

U. S. Mission in London Stirs Hope 'Knockout' Drive Is Near

By International News Service

London, May 26.—Arrival in Britain of an important United States mission composed of high-placed air, tank and infantry chiefs aroused widespread belief tonight that a joint Anglo-American "knockout" offensive against Germany may soon materialize.

The American party plunged immediately into conferences with Prime Minister Churchill and other British war leaders to complete plans which were authoritatively said to envision early inauguration of a huge air campaign. Such a campaign would be nourished largely by the mounting output of America's aircraft factories.

The air drive may shortly dispatch 1000 planes over Germany on every night of good weather as a preliminary "softening up" process preparatory to opening of a "second" land front in western Europe.

The make-up of the American war delegation was deemed a particularly significant indication of the closest Anglo-American coordination in any major assault that might be loosed upon Adolf Hitler's western flank. The mission was headed by Lieut. Gen. Henry K. Arnold, head of the United States Army Air Forces, and Rear Admiral John H. Towers, chief of the Navy Bureau of Aeronautics.

It included also Maj. Gen. Dwight W. Eisenhower, head of the operations division of the War Department and one of America's leading tank experts, and Maj. Gen. Mark W. Clark, chief of staff of the Army ground forces and an infantry specialist.

The time of the American mission's arrival in London also bore significance. For it followed by only a week announcement that the war's biggest American overseas expedition, consisting of many thousands of troops with considerable tank and gun equipment, had landed

Laval May Yield Fleet to Nazis To Balk Italy's Land Demands

By the Associated Press

London, May 26.—Trustworthy reports from the Continent that Hitler is using Italy's territorial demands on France to wring from Laval the use of the French fleet indicated tonight a new threat to the Allies' precarious mastery of the Mediterranean.

Sources with underground connections in Europe said Laval had given permission for the training of German sailors at French naval yards, a concession which it was assumed would permit them to familiarize themselves with the operation of the battleships Dunkerque and Strasbourg and other components of the fleet at Toulon.

Other advices from the Continent said Mussolini had served upon Laval a detailed note on Italy's territorial demands, particularly Corsica and Nice. Laval was said to have indicated willingness to discuss Tunisia which borders Italy's Libya, and which would be a valuable base for Axis operations in Africa and the Mediterranean.

Tonight, as Italy awaited a definite answer to these demands, it was announced from Rome that King Vittorio Emanuele and Crown Prince Umberto had returned from an inspection of troops in northern Italy, bordering France.

The Daily Herald said these troops were part of a strong army being concentrated on the French border by Mussolini to back up his demands upon Vichy to hand over the territorial concessions without further delay.

Highlighting the seriousness of these developments for the Allies, Admiral Sir Andrew Browne Cunningham, who arrived in London after relinquishing his command of the British Mediterranean fleet, admitted that it would be "very nasty" if the French fleet were

Fort Riley, Kans., May 27.—Horse troopers and mechanized alike, all must learn to fire the Cavalry's many weapons, and all qualify with the Garand rifle. And all of them, horse or mechanized, must become proficient in map reading and in the difficult Indian fighter tactics of the scout.

You can find them all over the place here, drawing maps, inching along on their bellies through brush and rocks, learning to ride or drive or walk so as to take advantage of every fold in the earth, of every fringe of trees or vagrant bush. Classes are divided, and half hides while the other half tries to find it. Men are sent out to demonstrate the right way and the wrong way of making themselves inconspicuous. What Kit Carson risked his life to learn is given to them free and safely by cavalrymen of long experience in doing it.

ANDREWS

After eight weeks of this sort of training the recruit is sent to a division or a regiment in the field, where he is drilled as a member of the equad he will fight with through the war. One such division is the second, training here where Camp Funston stood in the first World War.

The Second is cavalry in the old meaning of the term. Its cavalry regiments are horse regiments and its battalions of 75-millimeter howitzers are horse artillery as John Pelham conceived it. Its medical battalion has mule-drawn ambulances and its quartermaster battalion has pack mule troops to follow the horse troopers wherever they go.

This division three times in the last year attained a high degree of training, then has been decimated by loss of cadres for new cavalry outfits. Each time it has taken a hitch in its belt and started over again to train itself anew.

Designed to be used by a field army commander as a heavy scouting unit capable of pushing a reconnaisance in force to the limit, the cavalry division is high in fire power and mobility. Its

Soviet Fends Off Flank Attacks While Digging In On Kharkov Line

By the Associated Press

Moscow (Wednesday), May 27. — Marshal Timoshenko's forces dug into their newly won positions on the Kharkov front today after a deep advance from previously consolidated points while in the south the Red army is holding off increasingly violent German assaults on their flank, the Russians announced officially at midnight.

The midnight communique said the Russians were rapidly fortifying their reclaimed positions, which front line dispatches said were gained in a drive westward toward Kharkov on the right and center.

Claim 332 Nazi Planes Lost

In their desperate effort to crumble the Russian southern flank in the Izyum-Barvenkova sector, Soviet dispatches said, the Germans hurled swarms of parachutists into the battle of men and tanks only to have them picked off by Red army sharpshooters before they hit the ground.

Front-line dispatches said Cossack cavalrymen dismounted, took a bead on one Junkers transport loaded with parachutists and sent it crashing to earth. Two more of Hitler's troop carriers were reported bagged by rifle and machine-gun fire.

In the period of May 17-22 the communique listed 332 German planes destroyed against 127 losses to the Soviet airforce. A slackening in the fierce aerial warfare was indicated by the statement that on Monday only 11 Nazi craft and eight Russian craft were downed.

Nazis were bringing out a new and improved Messerschmitt fighter plane—the ME-115—to meet the growing Red air strength.

Nazi Tanks Repulsed

To the south there were reports of violent fighting along the banks of a river (probably the Donets) over which the Germans were declared seeking in vain to force their way with mechanized charges led by as many as 50 tanks a time.

In this area, said the Soviet command in its midday communique, a

Roosevelt Urges Navy 'Auxiliary'

President Roosevelt has suggested revision of the Navy bill to allow women to join a Navy Auxiliary on the same footing as members of the new Women's Army Auxiliary Corps.

It was learned by The Post last night that letters urging such a set-up had been sent by the President to Senator Walsh (Democrat) of Massachusetts, chairman of the Senate Naval Affairs Committee, and Secretary of the Navy Knox.

The Navy bill passed by the House provides for the enlistment of women "in" the naval forces on the same terms as men.

3000 Left on Field As Chinese Prepare For Heavier Blows

By the Associated Press

Chungking, China, May 26.—The Chinese, stubbornly opposing powerful Japanese attempts at a quick knockout in eastern China, announced today they had thrown the invaders back from the very walls of Kinhwa, but a spokesman soberly warned:

"The situation is still very grave and the coming week will witness even fiercer battles.

"We are entering what may turn out to be the toughest battles this summer in Asia."

The scene is central Chekiang Province, which fronts on the China Sea south of Shanghai, and from which bombers could reach Japan. An even larger Japanese onslaught is being prepared against Fukien Province, bordering Chkiang on the south, the Chinese spokesman asserted. He said the Japanese had thrown 100,000 men into the ferocious drive to conquer Chekiang, of which Kinhwa is the provisional capital.

Warship Puts Into Island Port As International Friction Mounts

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

International complications resulting from submarine warfare in Latin-American waters shifted to new fields yesterday, as the torpedoing of an American destroyer from inside the territorial waters of the French Island of Martinique was disclosed.

The U. S. S. Blakeley, a 1090-ton destroyer built in 1918, was attacked and damaged within sight of Martinique's shores, but managed to limp into Fort de France, principal port of the island. Ten members of her crew are missing and six were injured.

Second U-Boat Sunk

Coming at a time when negotiations as to the island's status are under way between the island government and the United States—negotiations with which the Vichy government has tried to interfere—the incident is expected to have repercussions here, in Berlin and in France.

Meanwhile, reports from Brazil told of the sinking of another enemy submarine in the South Atlantic—the second over the week-end—apparently by an American Army plane.

Associated Press dispatches from Fortaleza, Brazil, quoted a "high-source" to the effect that a "B-18" plane," a twin-motored Douglas bomber of the United States air patrol had sunk a second U-boat, and confirmed the earlier reports of the sinkng of the enemy craft Saturday.

The second U-boat, it was said, was sunk near Recife.

Crew of 34 Saved

These sources, telling of "great submarine activity" off the northeastern Brazilian coast, also said that more than one Axis U-boat was attacked in the encounter in which one was sunk Saturday.

During the day the Navy Department announced the sinking of a medium-sized Latvian freighter in the Caribbean, bringing to about 225 the number of United Nations and Latin-American ships sunk in the Western Atlantic since January.

All of the crew of 34 were saved and landed in Cuba. They were then taken to Miami, where members disclosed yesterday that they were 20 hours in an open boat before reaching shore.

Inside Martinique Waters

The newspaper, La Tribuna, of San Jose, Costa Rica, also reported than an American merchantman had been torpedoed and sunk in the Caribbean, 80 miles off the Costa Rican coast. This was reported without confirmation by the Associated Press, which said the San Jose paper stated that all of the crew were rescued by an American destroyer.

Announcement of the torpedoing of the destroyer Blakeley was made here by the Navy Department, which simply declared that the attack occurred in the Caribbean Sea.

Later, it was disclosed in St. Lucia, British West Indies, that the torpedo had come from a submarine lurking within Martinique waters.

Price Control Must Continue After War, Henderson Says

By Cecil B. Dickson
Washington Bureau of Chicago Sun

Continuation of price control after the war will be necessary, Price Administrator Leon Henderson told the House Appropriations Committee in asking for 210 million dollars to provide a force of more than 100,000 "price policemen."

Henderson, according to his secret testimony obtained by the Chicago Sun yesterday, also went on record for control of wages and profits, in contrast to a recent statement he issued.

"I propose to do everything I can on rents, prices and consumer credit, in which I have an obligation, and I expect to do everything I can on rationing," Henderson said, according to the transcript of his testimony. "On the other items of profits and wages, I expect to speak my 2 cents' worth as I have done."

"You think they (wages) should be controlled then, along with everything else?" asked Chairman Clarance Cannon (Democrat) of Montana.

"Yes, sir," replied Henderson.

Representative J. William Ditter, (Republican) of Pennsylvania, referring to previous testimony by Henderson, asked:

"I believe yesterday you testified it was your opinion that it would be necessary to continue price control after the war. Is that right?"

"That is my guess, based on the experience of the last war," Henderson replied. He added, however, that his work was not permanent, saying, "We regard our work absolutely as temporary."

Stressing the need for an increase in his force from 7200 to 102,000 persons, Henderson said the work

War Sidelights

Corporations Head, a Buck Private at 65

Tacoma, May 26 (AP).—Private Eugene L. Mann, 65-year-old president of four corporations, forsook the golf links and the easy chair today to report for Army duty at a $21 a month salary that probably won't keep him in cigars.

Private Mann drove up to the headquarters of the Fort Lewis military police headquarters in an expensive automobile, flicked the ashes from a 25-cent cigar, and reported to his sergeant.

This is Private Mann's third war. His first enlistment was in 1898 when he fought the Spaniards. He enlisted in 1917 and came out of the World War as a second lieutenant. Explained the retired businessman: "I figured I could come here and take the place of some young fellow that was needed up where there was real action."

His four companies, two of which he and his wife own outright, will run themselves, he explained, as they have during the last ten years.

Doctors at the induction center pounded and thumped the volunteer extra vigorously. They found him sound and recommended him for a noncombat duty. He was given the usual ten-day furlough "to straighten out his affairs." He spent the time on the golf links.

"My affairs have been settled for ten years," he remarked.

Fruits of War

Allied Headquarters, Australia, May 26 (AP).—Japanese Zero fighters were using pear-shaped shrapnel bombs as a new weapon against raiding formations, a Melbourne Herald reporter said today, quoting United Nations pilots.

The Zero fighters wait until the Allied bombers complete their mission and regain formation, then climb to a position 1000 feet above and somewhat ahead of the bombers and loose the time-fused "pear drops."

These burst with considerable violence, the pilots said, sending out showers of shrapnel and tongues of bluish white smoke.

Canada Cuts Rations

Ottawa, May 26 (AP).—The immediate rationing of tea and coffee and reduction by one-third in the existing sugar ration were announced today by Donald Gordon, chairman of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board.

The honor system used instead of ration cards since sugar rationing took effect, will be maintained in the new regulations.

The sugar ration was cut from three-quarters of a pound a week for each person to one-half pound.

Each individual's consumption of tea must be cut by one-half.

The consumption of coffee must be cut by one-fourth.

Shipping difficulties have made it essential to conserve stocks and reduce consumption of rationed commodities, it was said.

"Ships and sailors lives must not be risked to bring in a single pound of supplies from abroad with which we can do without," Gordon said.

series of heavy Nazi thrusts had been repulsed with great losses to the enemy.

Dispatches to the army organ Red Star drew a picture of continued Russian movement on the Kharkov front, specifically reporting a break in German defense lines which had hurled the invader back from a number of valuable points and forced him to hurriedly attempt to fortify a series of natural positions.

Here, said the paper, Russian shock troops burst through a thick screen of enemy fire to bayonet the Nazis out of their trenches, Soviet artillery meanwhile smashing as many as 23 enemy pillboxes in a single section.

A hundred German tanks, rushed in to repair the situation, were reported thrown back.

Other press dispatches claimed that Soviet airmen controlled the skies over the Kharkov front and described the Russian defense against the German mechanized arm as one of unprecedented success in nearly a year of war.

Aside from the customary weapons—antitank rifles, artillery, gasoline-filled bottles and antitank grenades—Soviet troops were using a light gun called the PTO which was said to be highly effective against enemy tanks.

Red Star's correspondent reported the recapture of three additional communities in a single sector, and other disatches stated that four cities in the Kharkov area, aside from a much greater number of towns and villages, had now been reclaimed.

Russian guerilla activity behind the German lines was reported growing in ferocity everywhere.

(The German high command reported that in a "a battle of encirclement" south of Kharkov, presumably about Izyum-Barvenkova Russian attempts to break out were being frustrated. At the same time, Axis troops were said to be moving in from the southwest and north and had "considerably restricted the enemy's freedom of movement."

("His closely packed masses," it was added, "are being subjected constantly to increasing blows of annihiliation by our air force."

(As to the main Kharkov front, the German command thus acknowledged that the Russians were maintaining the initative:

Holcombe, Grindley Safe; Rice, Rice, Rice Fare on Burma Trip

By Preston Grover
Associated Press Staff Writer

New Delhi, May 26.—Twenty-six foot-weary American doctors, civilians and military men who marched out of Burma with Lieut. Gen. Joseph H. Stilwell, proved that tastes can differ even when your diet is mostly rice, rice, rice.

For 140 miles these Americans, part of a polygot group of 104 emerging from Burma, legged it up hill and down jungle dale, through steaming rivers and among head-hunting Burmese to reach India.

Among them were Capt. John H. Grindley, a medical officer from Washington, D. C., and Col. William H. Holcombe, a native of Washington, whose family now resides in Alexandria, Va.

Most of the time they were just a couple of jumps ahead of the Japanese. They rode trucks, rafts and jeeps for the first several hundred miles—until they had to abandon mechanical transport and start hiking.

Today, refreshed by solid sleep, they were scattering throughout India to eat and rest and pick up again the fighting jobs that brought them to the Orient.

Part Spiced, Part Not Spiced

Lieut. Col. Frank Dorn of San Francisco, Stilwell's aide, who was the hikers' mess officer, fed the party of assorted nationalities. Besides the Americans and 19 Burmese nurses, there were Englishmen, Indians, Chinese and various racial intermixtures in the group.

"We divided into two groups very nicely," said Dorn. "One group of about 40, including the Burmese nurses, liked food highly spiced. Their food was cooked separately. Another group, of about 60, including most of the Americans, didn't like so much spice, so we had our food cooked without it.

"We often had to cut down on meats or make what we had stretch out, but we always had as much rice as we needed.

"One day, after the group received a supply of food from an English party meeting us from India, we decided to cook a meal without rice.

"'It was a good meal because a young English civil servant named T. A. Sharp brought us a whole string of supplies. But you should have heard the complaints because there was no rice.

"We served rice every day after that, even though it was about all we had had to eat in many days."

Dorn's job also was to buy chickens and other supplies from the natives. Once they had the luck to get two pigs and once the bad luck not to get a cow.

"We tried to get the natives to sell us a cow," he related, "but they refused. They were Buddhists and wouldn't kill the animal.

Born in Washington, Colonel Holcombe was graduated from Western High School here and attended West Point, graduating with high honors in 1914. During three years of duty in the Philippines from 1932 through 1935, he was in charge of an engineering division which constructed the highways and military encampments of Bataan Peninsula, where Gen. Before being assigned to duty in the Far East in February, he was assistant commandant at Fort Belvoir, and his family have lived in Belle Haven, Alexandria, since a few months before his departure.

Captain Grindley lived with his wife at 7704 Blair Road, Silver Spring, Md. He was on duty here at Walter Reed Hospital and when he was ordered abroad, Mrs. Grindley and their infant daughter left for her home in Milwaukee, Wis., friends said.

The severe pummeling given Malta, he said, has enabled the Axis to move considerable reinforcements and supplies to Africa recently because the sharpness of British attacks on Axis convoys passing near that mid-Mediterranean base has thus been blunted appreciably.

He described the French naval forces interned at Alexandria as "entirely pro-Vichy."

This outline of the situation, together with a dispatch from Istanbul reporting the movement of six Axis divisions recently for the possible reinforcement of Crete suggested to observers that a combined land, sea and air blow at the British in the eastern corner of the Mediterranean might be brewing.

Laval was pictured in advices reaching here as pinned between his two Axis masters jockeying to advance their own ends.

Italians Press for Concessions

While the Italians pressed for territory concessions to bolster home morale, Hitler was believed using Laval's reliance on him for protection against Mussolini to exact fleet concessions to Germany.

Berlin radio dispatches reflected German dissatisfaction with the fruits so far of Laval's collaboration policy and indicated Mussolini was being given a free hand.

Continental reports indicated Laval's position with the French people would become desperate if he granted any territory to the Italians, but there was little he could do if Italy set out to effect an occupation.

The French fleet at Toulon was said to be so nearly drained of fuel that it could not reach its Algerian bases in event of an emergency there.

In this desperate plight, Laval was said to have attempted a play for time, agreeing to the halfway measure of admitting German sailors to training at the naval bases and expressing willingness to negotiate on Tunisia.

Informants in Europe said, however, that it was doubtful if Italy would be satisfied with less than Corsica and Nice.

Door Open For Parley

The Italian demands, reported first to have been presented May 18, then outlined in detail in a later note at weekend conferences in Paris, were said not to have been in the form of an ultimatum and hence held the door open to negotiation.

Persons familiar with Italian conditions said that aside from Mussolini's natural ambition for territory he might be interested in carrying out an occupation now to have a pretext for not sending 300,000 or more fresh Italian troops to the Russian Front.

One reason for German impatience, said informants, is that Laval had found public sentiment much stronger against collaboration than he had expected and as a result had determined to go slowly.

There are indications, one London source said, that Hitler, far from being placated by Laval's concessions, is planning to grab the French fleet at Toulon by sudden use of parachutists and fifth columnists.

Admiral Cunningham, who is going to Washington to head the British admiralty delegation there, declared that "Italy was nearly out of the war" at the end of 1940, but that Britain had lacked the "very essentials" to deliver the knockuo.t

Expressing "every hope" that efforts would not be undone now by the French fleet, he said the Allies had been building toward the day when their air and sea power in the Mediterranean would "rapidly and surely overwhelm" Axis forces.

U. S. Mission Sees Churchill

in Northern Ireland.

From an unimpeachable London quarter it was learned that the American military leaders are anxious to have United States air units join the R. A. F. at the earliest possible time in enlarged, intensified bombings of Germany's war centers.

Air Training Merger

(A London broadcast heard in New York said Britain already is training more than 50,000 airmen yearly in North America. It added that the British Empire training scheme will be merged with the United States air training program as a result of the air training conference in Ottawa.)

Lieutenant General Arnold, who with his colleagues went to work immediately after their arival in London by train from a point where they had been landed from a transatlantic plane, was believed to have brought specific plans with him. These were said to be concerned with maximum American participation in the aerial bombing of German targets and in a land offensive if and when launched.

The prospect ofa vast Anglo-American air armada hammering Nazi objectives steadily was enhanced by the most authoritative comment in London. It was recalled that a high British official recently expressed the view that Germany could be finished off this year if 1000 planes could be sent over the Reich nightly. Today this same authority said he believed that figure might be reached before the year is out.

President Noncommittal About Second Front

President Roosevelt yesterday described the trip to London of the heads of the Army and Navy Air Forces as another link toward winning the war.

Reporters remarked that there had been a lot of speculation about a second front and asked the President whether the mission and the second front idea fitted together.

Well, he said, he didn't know, maybe they did and maybe they didn't.

"Does it depend on what Gen. Arnold concludes after talking with the British?" he was asked.

But Mr. Roosevelt dodged that one, saying his questioner was pressing him too closely.

Nor was he willing to assert that any reasonable deduction could be made from the fact that the American mission emphasized aviation. The next time, he said, the mission might be entirely naval.

Australia Requests More War Priority

Citizens Feel Position In Pacific Requires Greater Assistance

By Edward Angly
Chicago Sun Foreign Service

Sydney, Australia, May 26.—Whether in uniform or in mufti, most Australians observed Empire Day by keeping their noses to the grindstone. Their leaders also kept one eye cocked at Japan—while their thoughts turned longingly toward London and Washington.

There is still a strong feeling here, both in civil and military circles, that Australia aught to have more priority in the matter of men and materials allocated by the bigwigs of Whitehall and Pennsylvania Avenue to the various fronts.

Articulate in Their Pleading

Never at a loss words, the Australians havesbeen even more articulate than usual during the last week in pleading their cause, particularly in London. Like a leif motif runs the daily strain that Australia is now as important to the cause of the democracies, either as a place worth saving or as one from which to start on the offensive, as was Britain immediately after Dunkerque.

As a prelude to Empire Day, which is something of a sentimental family reunion of the various members of the British Commonwealth of Nations, the Australians blew their horns quite loudly in London and elsewhere.

Prime Minister Churchill apparently has devoted many an hour in the company of Dr. Herbert V. Evatt, the Australian minister for external affairs. The London newspapers, according to reports received here, have generously put their rationed columns at the disposal of those reminding the mother country that Australia sent not only her best men but even denuded herself of guns to help when Britain was sorely in need of aid.

Important Base for Operations

In an article written for The Sunday Times, Warwick Fairfax, managing editor of the company that owns The Sydney Morning Herald, says that before the happy intervention of Russia, President Roosevelt obviously was beginning to think about the difficulty of beating Hitler if Great Britain should be lost.

"I wonder if Americans have thought quite so hard about the difficulty of beating Japan if Australia should be lost," he wrote.

"In either case, the United States would have to strike over at least 2500 miles of open sea. That is the same as the distance from Newfoundland to Ireland, and it is also the same as the distance from Dutch Harbor in the Aleutians to Tokyo, and from Pearl Harbor to Truk, the chief Japanese base in the Marshalls."

Japs Revise Sea Losses Downward

(Dispatches from enemy countries are published with the warning that they frequently contain misleading information intended for propaganda purposes.)

By the Associated Press

Tokyo (From Japanese Broadcasts, May 26.—The Domei News Agency revised downward today Japan's losses in the Battle of the Coral Sea, a day after imperial headquarters had revised upward the losses claimed inflicted upon the United Nations.

Domei said that seven missing Japanese planes had been picked up by Japanese warships, reducing to 24 the number that failed to return.

Small Carrier Admitted Lost

Besides the plane losses, the only announced Japanese casualty was the sinking of a "small-sized Japanese aircraft carrier converted from a tanker."

Against these losses, imperial headquarters has said the Japanese sank five warships, including one battleship; two aircraft carriers, a cruiser and a destroyer; heavily damaged two battleships and a cruiser, and shot down 98 aircraft.

(After the sea fight, Gen. Douglas MacArthur declared officially that United States losses were "relatively light" and said Japanese claims were fantastic.

(United Nations communiques have stated 23 or 24 Japanese warships and other vessels etiher were sunk or damaged in the battle and follow-up operations.

Colonizing Projected

A large scale program to send Japanese colonists, specialists and workers into the conquered territories of the southwest Pacific "to facilitate the development of natural resources" was announced by the government today after a cabinet session.

Thousands of Japanese residents who were removed from the Dutch East Indies, Malaya and the Philippines shortly before outbreak of the Pacific war are to be returned.

Dr. Hans Thomsen Gets Nazi Knight's Cross

Berlin (from German broadcasts) May 26 (AP).—Adolf Hitler awarded the Knight's Cross of the War Servlee Cross today to Dr. Hans Thomsen, former German charge d'affaires in Washington. The citation said the award was "for special services rendered as a diplomatic representative of the Reich." Dr. Thomsen returned to Europe recently on the diplomatic exchange ship Drottningholm.

WAAC Recruiting Starts Here Today

Same As WAAC

President Urges Navy 'Auxiliary'

President Roosevelt has suggested to the Senate Naval Affairs Committee and to Secretary of the Navy Knox that legislation setting up a women's auxiliary for the Navy should follow lines similar to that which established the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps, The Post learned last night.

In letters to Senator Walsh (Democrat of Massachusetts, chairman of the committee, and to Secretary Knox, the Chief Executive doubted the wisdom of having two types of noncombatant services for women volunteers.

This means the Navy bill, which would permit women "into" the Navy, must be completely revised. As the House passed the measure, women could be enlisted in the Navy on the same terms as men. The WAAC, on the other hand, is an auxiliary setup to work "with" the Army—rather than be "in" it.

When the Navy bill passed the House, the WAAC bill still was pending in the Senate and the War Department made an effort to amend it there to put the WAACS "in." This suggested amendment failed to pass the Senate Military Affairs Committee.

The bill before the Senate Naval Affairs Committee now is not the House bill, as introduced by Representative Maas (Republican) of Minnesota, but a compromise proposed by Senator Walsh. The compromise retained the "in the Navy" features, but changed its pension provisions so that compensation would be paid under the United States Employes Compensation Act—as the WAACS will get paid—rather than under regular veterans' legislation.

Rear Admiral Randall Jacobs, Navy personnel officer, at hearings before the Senate committee, declared last week the Navy desired "full military control" over the auxiliary and therefore was asking it be "in" rather than "with."

Several Senators at that time expressed doubt that two basically different pieces of legislation should be passed and Senator Gerry (Democrat) of Rhode Island is understood to have been drafting a bill like that setting up the WAAC.

Both at hearings and on the floor debate on the WAAC bill showed members of the Army auxiliary will be subject to full dicipline under the Articles of War.

Only Candidates For Officer School To Be Taken at First

By Christine Sadler
Post Staff Writer

Local man with a problem on his hands today is Sergt. P. J. DiFazio, officer in charge of recruiting Washington volunteers for the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps.

He and four assistants will be at the District recruiting station, Eleventh Street and New York Avenue Northwest, from 8 a. m. until 5 p. m. to hand out application blanks—if they arrive from Baltimore in time.

Last night the blanks had not arrived, and the sergeant was worried. Officers in Baltimore, which is recruiting headquarters for the Third Corps Area, assured him they would be in the morning mail. But that usually arrives about 8:45 a. m. and DiFazio, who dreads that 45 minutes, still was hoping he could get some blanks sent over special.

Every day since the WAAC bill passed, DiFazio and his associates have had from 30 to 50 calls from prospective applicants. They are expecting a rush this morning and also an avalanche of questions.

Answers En Masse

"We've thought up a little plan for dealing with the questions," he said last night. "We thought we would get from 11 to 15 of them lined up and talk to them all at once, rather than trying to explain everything to each one individually."

The recruiting beginning this morning will be only for candidates for officers' training school and will continue through June 4.

Sixty candidates will be selected from this area, which includes Maryland, Virginia, Pennsylvania and the District.

Application blanks when returned must be accompanied by a birth certificate, proof of a high school education, and a preliminary health examination record. Washington volunteers will mail this data to the District Recruiting Officer, Baltimore.

Applicants will be selected on the basis of leadership, personality, past experience, and general adaptability.

No privates will be enrolled until the first officer training course of eight weeks has been completed.

Age Limit is Raised

The War Department yesterday announced an amendment to its previous decision that all officers must meet the 21 to 45 years age requirement set in the WAAC bill for the Auxiliaries. Candidates between 45 and 49, inclusive, can apply for admission to the officers' training school. Under provisions of the law, they cannot be enrolled in the WAAC, but if successful at the school they will be appointed officers, the War Department said.

"Those who are not successful in obtaining commissions will be released from further service and will not be retained as auxiliaries," it was stated. "Also these candidates will get the same benefits and pay as those under 45."

This amendment presumably is in answer to the vast amount of complaining from "older women" who had hoped to be officers, before it was decided all must go through the school and that only the director would be appointed.

Candidates between the ages of 21 and 45 will be retained as auxiliaries if they fail to get their commissions.

Elimination Tests

Applicants for the scheel will be notified when and where to report for a mental alertness test, a physical examination and an interview, according to War Department rulings. Those who pass these tests will be sent to Corps Area headquarters, where they will be interviewed by the Corps Area commander and two women assistants. A total of 120 from each area will be selected for this interview, and from these, 60 will be chosen for enrollment to the War Department. There the approximately 450 candidates for the Nation finally will be approved.

While in training, candidates will receive $50 a month, uniforms and maintenance. The first group of commissioned and noncommissioned officers will be immediately detailed to the training of the first unit of auxiliaries.

He Has Plan for Getting Women Lined Up

Sergt. DiFazio expects a rush of applicants and an avalanche of questions. Said Sergt. Australia Calls 31,800 More For War Work

By the Associated Press

Canberra, Australia, May 26.—The Australian war cabinet called up 31,800 more men and women for munitions, shipbuilding and aircraft labor today and announced other drastic decisions gearing Australia's economy to a war pace.

Prime Minister John Curtin said these decisons also had been taken:

There will be no restrictions of plans for expansion of the armed forces or the munitions, shipbuilding and aircraft industries, but man power commitments will be constantly reviewed by the government.

There will be an immediate and progressive reconciliation between the proposed army and air force establishments and the equipment, much of it from the United States, now becoming available.

There will be a drastic curtailment of nonessential activities throughout the whole national economy, including public works and services, factories, commerce and finance.

Single order labor priorities will be established.

The government announced it would have the closest consultations with the trade unions and other organizations about the basic features of Australia's war commitments.

The war cabinet reached its decisions, Curtain said, after reviewing the situation "in the light of altered conditions."

Curtain made it plain also that a great many women would be used in jobs formerly held by men.

A national service office was designated as the only channel for allocating labor.

3 Die in Blast At Body Plant

Lansing, Mich., May 26 (AP).—An explosion ripped part of the Fisher Body Corp. plant here today, killing at least three workmen and injuring another.

Army Ordnance officers opened an investigation into the blast which company officials said occurred in one of four large underground gasoline tanks being cleaned. A spark from an acetylene torch was believed to have been the cause. Police Chief John F. O'Brien said the plant was "tooling up" for war production.

Justice Goldsborough Clashes With Jap Agents' Counsel

By Dillard Stokes
Post Staff Writer

Justice T. Alan Goldsborough clashed sharply yesterday with counsel for Frederick Vincent Williams, Japanese agent, on trial in the District Court for criminal conspiracy and violation of the Foreign Agents Act.

The justice reprimanded Defense Attorney Samuel F. Beach for trying to place Williams' testimony in a California grand jury investigation before the jurors impaneled here.

Special Prosecutors Albert E. Arent and Arthur B. Caldwell protested. First, they said, the statements were "self-serving" and were not proper to be read; second, they objected because Williams' statements tended to involve his codefendant, David Warren Ryder.

Tokyo Spent $195,000

Both men are on trial for conspiring with five Japanese and the Japanese agent, Ralph Townsend, Scribner's Commentator writer, to violate the Foreign Agent Act in the operation of the Japanese propaganda committee, Jikyoku Iinkai.

After a lengthy discussion during which the jurors were kept out of court, the justice ruled that what Williams testified in San Francisco was not to the purpose and that the grand jury transcript might not be read. Williams began testifying in his own defense.

Williams declared he had no idea that the propaganda agency was an instrument of the Tokyo government, which spent $195,000 to have Jikyoku Iinkai spread the doctrine that America had no enemies in Asia.

"Now, Mr. Williams," Beach began, reading from the disputed transcript, "did you give such-and-such testimony in California?"

"Enough of That," Jurist Snaps

"That's enough of that," Justice Goldsborough snapped. "The court has already ruled that this will not be permitted. How many times do I have to repeat that you can't read these self serving statements? Mr. Williams is here on the stand. You ask him the questions and let him tell what he knows."

"Well, if I may not show the truth of this matter," said Beach, "I have no further questions."

Prosecutor Caldwell spent the afternoon cross-examining Williams.

Earlier in the day, Justice Goldsborough refused to order the jury to acquit the two men.

"There is no doubt," said the justice, "that there is in the record, so far, ample evidence to justify the inference that these two men were, in common parlance, acting as "front men" for the Japanese government. And, of course, they knew they were so acting."

3 Spanish Generals Reported Jailed; One Suner's Rival

(Copyright by Chicago Sun)

London, May 26.—Three Spanish generals have been arrested and sent to Cadiz, where they are being detained, according to reports from Madrid reaching here today.

One of them is said to be Gen. Espinoza de Los Monterros, former Spanish Ambassador in Berlin and great rival of Spanish Foreign Minister Ramon Serrano Suner.

Speaking publicly in parliament Gen. Espinoza bluntly declared that Spain is menaced less by foreign domination than by Serrano Suner.

The reported arrest and imprisonment of General Espinoza appeared to remove Serrano Suner's No. 1 rival, and consequently strengthened Serrano Suner as leader of the Falange (Spanish Fascist Party) and as foreign minister.

King Honors 3 for Farming Under Fire

Copyright by Chicago Sun

London, May 26.—A farmer, his wife and a 19-year-old girl have been awarded medals for heroism under fire, for continuing to grow food for the nation on a farm, at "Helfire Corner" at Dover, only 24 miles from the German long-range guns on the French coast.

The King gave the George medal to Gilbert Mitchell, 36-year-old farmer, and he gave the British Empire medal to Mitchell's wife, Kathleen, 35, and Miss Grace Patterson, a Land Army volunteer, who stuck to her job with the Mitchells for two years of the blitz.

The Official Gazette stated that all three "gave an unexampled effort and have shown sustained bravery to duty."

Mitchell, when told of the honor and asked about his experiences, said:

"One gets used to everything—so do the cows and chickens."

His 130-acre farm is situated on the coast of Dover, but since the military authorities did not requisition the land, he refused to evacuate.

Sometimes 200 Shells Daily

After Dunkerque, Mitchell said, as many as 200 shells a day fell in the neighborhood of the farm. Up to the present, 12 huge shells have actually hit within the two-acre area occupied by his house, barn, orchard and vegetable garden. Many more shells dug huge craters in his ploughed fields and pasture. He said the only casualties were a couple of sheep.

Many times during the day, German planes came over at housetop levels and machine-gunned the fields. Once the Mitchells dived under the tractor for shelter. The shelling at first affected the nerves of the cattle, horses and chickens, Mitchel said. The cows ceased giving milk. The horses were so nervous that they balked at being taken out of their stalls in the morning. "But after a while, the animals, like ourselves, got used to the crashes and the noise," Mitchell declared.

Mrs. Mitchell had the closest escape of all. She was out feeding the chickens early one morning when a shell crashed into some outbuildings 100 yards away. She admitted that she dropped the feeding bucket and scurried for shelter.

Shell Holes Too Deep to Fill

Mrs. Mitchell maintained, however, that on only one night did the three of them leave their own beds and try to sleep in the cellar of the house. It was on the night of an especially violent long-range gun duel on both sides of the Straits of Dover.

The noise was so terrific, she said, and the foundation of the house vibrated so much that they could not sleep. They got up and drank tea until breakfast, when work started as usual.

Today grass is growing in shell holes so dep they could not be filled in. All around the craters lies plowed land. Mitchell is determined to stick on the most shelled and shot at spot in the British Isles.

Kinhwa Walls Hold Off Japs In Grim Fight

the north and northwest, had smashed three Chinese divisions to the east, and that the strong four-pointed invasion had cut off the retreat of any remaining Chinese.)

The Chinese said they still held Kinhwa as of last night, having inflicted 3000 casualties on the Japanese who tried to storm the city from three sides and routed and virtually wiped out a Japanese force in the village of Wulipao, 2 miles south of Kinhwa.

Chinese Cling Tenaciously

Another 1000 Japanese were killed or wounded north of Lanchi, 45 miles north of Kinhwa, when a speedy Chinese column attacked from the rear, a Chinese communique said.

It credited Chinese field artillery with an important part in the defense of Kinhwa, saying Japanese artillery was prevented from going into action.

Lacking air support and under continual Japanese bombardment, the Chinese have clung tenaciously, and the spokesman sounded this note of guarded optimism today:

"It is hoped that our troops on the various fronts soon will be spared the pangs of battling against unequal odds without air protection and that new ways of transportation will be established speedily."

His only hint as to how this might be accomplished was the comment that the strengthening of India's defenses would be "valuable in maintaining our communications with our allies," coupled with word that the Chinese have been counter-attacking on the Yunnan Province front in southwest China since last Saturday.

"Unusual" Losses Inflicted

The Chinese said that they had surrounded and were threatening to annihilate a Japanese force on the west bank of the Salween River at the Huiting Bridge on the Burma Road, and that they had inflicted "unusual losses" on the Japanese by bombing the Japanese-held Chinese towns of Lungling and Tengytueh. Among Japanese losses 50 supply trucks were listed. Chinese in Burma were declared to be continually attacking the Japanese rear in the Mytikyina area.

(The British announced they had bombed and damaged Japanese steamers, launches and barges in three river areas of north Burma.)

The Japanese meanwhile are consolidating a force of warships, including aircraft carriers, with troop transports at the Japanese island of Formosa, opposite Fukien Province, said the Chinese. The Japanese last week made heavy landing attacks on the Fukien coast, and the Chinese Central News Agency said two Japanese gunboats shelled the coast near the port of Foochow yesterday while Japanese planes bombed Mamoi nearby.

Four more Japanese gunboats were observed in the Min River, on which Foochow lies.

"Some enemy mechanized units also have landed in Indo-China, but it is premature to say what he (the enemy) has in mind," the spokesman said.

The Associated Press dispatches declared that the United States destroyer was patroling these sea areas in accordance with an agreement between the United States and the French high commissioner of Martinique, Admiral Robert Georges.

An International News Service story from St. Lucia said that the Blakeley entered Fort de France with her bow crumpled and tied up alongside the French aircraft carrier Bearn. The Bearn is being disarmed under an agreemen' between Admiral Georges and American officials.

There was no definite word of the nationality of the submarine which attacked the Blakeley, but it was presumed to be an Axis craft. German and Italian undersea raiders have been operating in the Caribbean, though this was the first attack on an American warship within that sea.

Coast Guard Ship Sunk

A small, unarmed Coast Guard ship, used as a lighthouse and buoy tender, was sunk in the Caribbean some weeks ago. Just five days ago the Dominican steamer Presidente Trujillo was torpedoed and sunk when only an hour out of Fort de France. Other merchant vessels have been attacked in the general area in recent weeks.

The State Department here withheld comment on the Blakeley attack, but there was immediate unofficial speculation as to the effect of the incident on the present negotiations at Fort de France and what the United States may do to prevent other such attacks within Martinique waters.

There was also unofficial discussion as to the status of the Blakeley as a belligerent warship in the neutral harbor of Fort de France. Authorities on international law pointed out that long standing doctrine permitted such a disabled ship to remain in a neutral port long enough to make emergency repairs so as to permit her to put to sea again.

The Navy here said that injured men on the destroyer have been hospitalized and the next of kin of those missing have received notice. No other details were given in the brief communique.

The intensified Axis U-boat campaign in Latin-American waters, which has already brought Mexico to the point of war, seemed to be having increased political effect over a wide area.

Dispatches from Belem, capital of the Brazilian state of Para, declared that the sinking of the Axis submarine by United States planes Saturday caused "widespread public expressions of satisfaction."

Capt. Severino Statero of the torpedoed Brazilian ship Commandante Lyra was quoted by the Associated Press at Fortaleza, Brazel, as charging that the attack was the "result of fifth column activity."

Information of Cargoes

"The enemy not only knows the route of our vessels, but even has information of the cargo aboard and where it is loaded," he said. "I am certain of this because the submarine fired incendiary shells at the point below the bridge where we were carrying a quantity of explosives, instead of firing at the hull in an atempt to sink the vessel."

In Buenos Aires, meanwhile, the newspaper El Mundo, said the Argentine tanker Victoria, damaged off Cape Hatteras a month ago, had been attacked by torpedoes from a submarine of "the same flag which sank the Argentine steamer Uruguay off the Spanish coast" early in the war. (The Uruguay was sunk by a German submarine.) El Mundo, the AP said, demanded an energetic protest by the Argentine government.

Wines of Normandie Are Sold at Auction

New York, May 26 (AP).—Wines of rare vintage, whiskies and other spirits taken from the cellars of the former French liner Normandie were sold today at public auction for $20,723.

Some of the wines were purchased at 40 per cent above their retail value, dealers said, as the curious and the souvenir-hunters had a field day. The appraised value of the 17,900 bottles was $20,834. One of the rarest offerings was 22 bottles of Chateau Mouton Rothschild 1928, which sold for $90. The appraisal was $75.

U. S. Offers Soviet Proposal for Postwar Economic Bloc

By Thomas F. Reynolds
Washington Bureau of Chicago Sun

The United States yesterday offered Russia a draft proposal for a master lend-lease agreement which reportedly answers the challenge of Hitler's "new order" by laying the basis for a postwar American-British-Soviet economic bloc.

A few hours after the rough draft was handed by Secretary of State Hull to Ambassador Litvinoff, President Roosevelt described the proposal as identical with other master lend-lease agreements already signed.

In thus identifying the plan wth the master-agreement signed last February 22 with Great Britain, Mr. Roosevelt disclosed that within the framework of lend-lease dealings, the basis is being established for closer economic cooperation between this country, Great Britan and Russia than ever before in history.

The basic principles of these master agreements, which the U. S.-British agreement exemplifies, include "national and international measures to expand production, employment and the exchange and consumption of goods" and elimination of "all forms of discriminatory treatment in international commerce to reduce tariffs and other trade barriers and generally to attain the economic objectives of the Atlantic Charter."

Litvinoff, refusing comment to newspapermen, accepted the draft for transmission to Moscow. Soviet signature of an agreement committing the Russian government to such a joint economic policy with the United States and Britain in the immediate postwar era might well be one of the major developments of the current war.

A victorious America, Britain and Russia, operating in close collaboration economically after the war, obviously would comprise an economic bloc which would dominate the rest of the world.

Mr. Roosevelt refused to discuss details of the Russian lend-lease proposal. As early as last March, the Lend-Lease Administration had disclosed that negotiations for a master agreement with Russia were under way, and on last April 18, acting Lend-Lease Administrator Thomas B. McCabe revealed that the total lend-lease aid "sent to Russia in March was two and one-half times as great as that sent in February," although, for military reasons, exact figures were withheld.

The Lend-Lease Administration has made no secret of the program to bind the postwar economies of the United Nations closely together by master agreements which specify economic equity as the first principle on which repayment of lend-lease advances will be decided.

"Insofar as differing economic and political circumstances permit," the Administration said in its first annual report, "it is expected that good will and self-interest will soon lead to the negotiations of uniform and comprehensive master agreements among the United Nations, laying a foundation for future action designed to fulfill the victory and safeguard the peace."

Significantly, the master agreement then negotiated with Britain left the door wide open for adherence to similar principles by others of the United Nations. The fundamental framework of final lend-lease agreements, that master pact said, "shall be a settlement by agreement open to participation by all other nations of like mind."

Under that specific proviso, there is no barrier to ready adherence to the pact by the U. S. S. R.

Original operations by which Russia procured vast quantities of materials and weapons in this country were conducted on a cash basis. Later credits were advanced to facilitate the Russian operations in this country and finally, lend-lease facilities were made available to the Soviet as the importance of the Russian armies as the United Nations first line of defense against Hitler became increasingly apparent.

Union-Racketeering Bill Is Reported

House Committee Approves Move to Plug Loophole Uncovered by Supreme Court

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Legislation subjecting labor unions to the Federal antiracketeering laws and plugging a gap uncovered by the Supreme Court in a decision last March was favorably reported yesterday by the House Judiciary Committee.

The bill, setting up heavy penalties for any interference with movement of commodities in interstate commerce, was slated for a Rules Committee hearing later this week and probable early consideration by the House.

It was the first labor legislation to clear a committee since Administration forces early this month succeeded in pigeonholing House 48-hour-week legislation and in side-tracking the Connally plant-seizure bill in the Senate.

Vinson Bill Passed Over

Temporarily passed over by the Judiciary Committee was the Vinson bill, requiring registration of both labor and trade organizations, and still pending in subcommittee was the Monroney bill subjecting labor organizations to the antitrust laws.

The antiracketeering measure approved yesterday was drawn by Representative Sam Hobbs (Democrat) of Alabama, chairman of the subcommittee. It was reportedly approved by a 9-to-3 vote.

Representative Eugene Cox (Democrat) of Georgia, ranking member of the House Rules Committee, said he was "confident the Rules Committee will give it right of way and that the House will enthusiastically adopt it."

Author Discusses Bill

Hobbs said the measure was designed to "repeal" the March Supreme Court ruling that payments extorted by force and violence from out-of-town truckers by members of a teamsters' union were not covered by the existing antiracketeering law.

"It simply says that whoever impedes interstate commerce by robbery or extortion is guilty of a felony, and there is nothing anti-labor about that," Hobbs told reporters.

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, had opposed the measure as "antilabor."

The bill defines robbery as unlawful taking of property "by means of actual or threatened force or violence, or fear of injury, immediate or future." It describes extortion as taking of property with another's consent "by wrongful use of actual or threatened force, violence, or fear, or under color of official right."

The key section reads: "Whoever in any way or degree obstructs, delays, or affects commerce, or the movement of any article or commodity in commerce, by robbery or extortion, shall be guilty of a felony."

Conspiracy, threat of violence or attempts to do anything in violation of the section, would similarly be punishable as a felony. Penalties were fixed at a maximum of ten years imprisonment or $10,000 fine or both.

Measure Toned Down

Originally the measure included in its scope "the preparation of any article or commodity for commerce" but Chairman Sumners protested this was "too broad" and it was dropped on motion of Hobbs.

Unions were not specifically mentioned, but Hobbs said the bill was founded on the principle that "highway robbery is highway robbery, whether the pepetrator holds a union card or not."

Incorporated in the bill was an amendment by Defense Traffic Coordinator Eastman, which similarly penalyzes willful interference with the movement of troops, war supplies or munitions. The President is given wartime authority to use the armed forces "to prevent or remove any such obstruction to or retardation of the passage of the mail, or the orderly transportation or movement of interstate or foreign commerce, or the transportation of troops, munitions or war supplies."

During hearings on the bill, Hobbs unsuccessfully sought testimony by Assistant Attorney General Thurman Arnold, reportedly in favor of even stronger legislation. Attorney General Biddle objected, and Arnold did not testify. A bill by Senator Holman (Republican) of Oregon likewise designed to cover labor unions under the antiracketeering law is still pending before the Senate Judiciary Committee.

House Votes Wire Tapping for War Purposes

A bill authorizing wire tapping by certain Federal agencies in detection of war crimes and providing for admission of evidence thus obtained in trials, was passed yesterday by the House.

It will go to the Senate immediately, where House spokesmen predicted it would pass quickly.

The measure would authorize the Federal Bureau of Investigation, the Army Intelligence Division and the Office of Naval Intelligence to:

Require that telegrams, cablegrams, radiograms, or other communications be delivered to authorized agents when there is reasonable suspicion than an offense against the national security is about to be committed.

Use as evidence in court information obtained through the interception of communications, including listening in on or tapping telephone, telegraph, cable, radio and other messages.

War crimes in which wire tapping would be employed include sabotage, treason, espionage, sedition, and other subversive activities.

The bill was passed by a voice vote.

If enacted, it would remain in effect only until six months after the end of the war.

Before the House voted, Representative Sam Hobbs (Democrat) of Alabama declared that if the bill had been law before December 7, there would have been no attack on Pearl Harbor.

"I made that statement on my own initiative and responsibility," Hobbs told the House. "It is true, as every member of the Judiciary Committee knows who heard testimony in executive committee. We know whereof we speak, though we can't take Congress into our confidence."

Before Pearl Harbor, the House rejected a similar bill. Since the report on the December 7 attack by Supreme Court Justice Owen J. Roberts and his investigating committee, which intimated that prohibition of use of wire-tapping evidence had hampered antiespionage work, advocates of the measure have pressed with increasing success for its passage.

Lower Gift Exemption Wins Support

The House Ways and Means Committee yesterday approved a single $60,000 exemption from taxes on both estates and insurance and lowered the gift tax exemption from $40,000 to $30,000.

The committee's action closely followed Treasury recommendations on estate and gift tax exemptions. Put over until today was the controversial question of rates.

The present estate tax law permits a $40,000 exemption for all property and another $40,000 in life insurance, or a total of $80,000. By yesterday's vote, the two would be merged into a single exemption of $60,000.

Besides voting to lower the gift tax exemption to $30,000, the committee cut from $4000 to $3000 the limit on individual gifts that may be made without taxes to an unlimited number of persons.

The Treasury has recommended that the present 3 to 70 per cent range of estate tax rates be increased to a spread of 8 to 80 per cent, and the committee may vote on this question today. Gift taxes are three-fourths estate tax rates.

All U. S. Faces Gasoline Rationing to Save Rubber

largely to an expression of hope that some of the experiments now under way might produce a substitute tire before those now in use on cars throughout the country should be entirely worn out.

While he deplored what he termed over-excitement in connection with the dark outlook facing auto drivers, the President went no farther than to hope that some substitute might be worked out.

Mr. Roosevelt's remarks were made casually in reply to a question as to progress of the synthetic rubber program. He told reporters work was in progress on two or three kinds of tires which would require no rubber. If the experiments were successful and the people received such tires and would drive at 25 or 30 miles an hour, he said, they could get to town all right.

Lest even this faintly hopeful statement be misinterpreted, officials dealing with the rubber shortage problem held a conference later in the afternoon to stress again the seriousness of the situation.

Henderson, Nelson Confer

Nelson conferred with Leon Henderson, price administrator; Arthur B. Newhall, rubber coordinator, and Isador Lubin, economic adviser. Then, at a press conference, Nelson said he assumed Mr. Roosevelt was expresing the same hope that Nelson himself had voiced, that substitute materials might be found to provide transportation for civilians.

He said, however, he saw little promise that such would be the case, and reiterated that no rubber, including synthetics, was in sight for civilian tires within the next two years.

Newhall said he was hopeful that "we'll find something useful—but it won't be made of rubber."

Nelson said that while no steps were taken at present toward commandeering of tires, for which an act of Congress would be required, a plan soon would be announced under which car owners would sell their extra tires to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

Florida Pipeline Weighed

Regarding the East's gasoline shortage, President Roosevelt said at his press conference that he expected shortly a report on the proposal to lay a pipeline across northern Florida to help deliveries. He said the line would cost about nine million dollars, which is provided in legislation pending in Congress, but said he might allocate the money from a special fund if assured that the appropriation would be approved.

The Truman committee report warned the Army and Navy to stop "joyriding" use of their vehicles. It observed that the armed services "have to date apparently been content to require the elimination of rubber for civilian use and have acted on the assumption that what rubber they need will be available."

It is possible, Truman suggested, that military specifications for rubber are too high "in view of the concededly short life of military equipment when it is engaged in battle." The German army, he said, has been able to get along on 200,000 tons of rubber a year, while the British have used rubber in far less quantities than the United States.

The most important of three "principal causes" behind the failure of the Government's rubber stock pile program, said the report, "was the fact that industrial consumption was permitted to absorb most of the rubber brought into the country, in quantities far exceeding consumption theretofore known."

The first reason for the stock pile failure, the report stated, was the insistence of British and Dutch interests in control of virtually all of the world's production of natural rubber on maintenance of restricted production quotas "even with Dunkerque behind them."

Although relaxation of quota restrictions was not obtained "soon enough," the situation "was not attributable to any lack of energy on the part of Secretary of Commerce Jesse Jones and the Rubber Reserve Co.," the report stated.

The Secretary was criticized, however, for reducing the experimental production of synthetic rubber from 100,000 to 10,000 tons annually in 1941 after 100,000 tons had been suggested as a proper plant capacity by the National Defense Advisory Council.

Price Controls After War Seen By Henderson of his office was growing every day.

Up to Local Boards

"The local rationing boards will be responsible for the rationing programs and for all the price programs," he said. "The burden will be heavier in the rationing programs, because they will have to make decision on the basis of applications as to who gets the material and who goes without."

Henderson pointed out that in World War I there were 35,000 paid and volunteer workers in the food administration and fuel administration alone.

"This is the largest single economic undertaking the world has ever known," Henderson emphasized.

He expects to set up 300 district offices, 51 State offices, 8 regional offices and 250 rent administrative offices throughout the country. Nine thousand workers would be in Washington, 50,000 on local boards and 30,000 in regional and State offices, Henderson said.

Opposes Tire Seizure

Representative Emmett O'Neal (Democrat), Kentucky, complained about the huge force and the amount of money Henderson wants.

"I will say that I fail to see why we should have to recruit 100,000 to 150,000 people for this effort," O'Neal said. "There are a tremendous number of people in every community in this country that are very anxious to help and to do their little bit, and I think you can recruit from the existing county officers, city officers and State officers a large part of this 100,000 to 150,000 people you are going to have. It would mean a tremendous saving."

Henderson testified that there was no plan for compulsory requisitioning of automobile tires at this time.

"If the military forces find themselves in dire need of rubber we may come to the point of requisitioning, because the big supply of rubber right now is that on vehicles traveling the roads," he said. "I back away from it myself."

be required to feed, clothe and pay an Army of five million men, without allowance for full military equipment and munitions.

The new bill would be keyed to reach the Army's share in all of the production goals set by the President—185,000 planes, 122,000 tanks and 55,000 antiaircraft guns in 1942 and 1943. Since those goals were announced, the President has hinted a possible expansion of the program.

ditional child. Provisions are also made for other dependents.

The measure would make life insurance compulsory for all service men and provide that the Government pay at least half of the premium. Service men would be liable to no more than $3.50 per month. Service men are now given a free $5000 policy.

Another provision in the bill sponsored by Senator Johnson (Democrat) of Colorado authorizes a broad revision of the Selective Service regulations regarding classification for induction. It also would permit deferment on the basis of family need rather than upon financial dependency alone.

The behind-the-scenes fight in the House was precipitated when Representative Rankin (Democrat) of Mississippi insisted upon retention of his amendment in the Army pay bill, which hiked the increase to $50 instead of the $42 originally proposed in the Senate.

Roll Call Sought

Senate-House conferees agreed last Saturday on the lower figure, but Rankin said yesterday that he has been assured of enough votes to override the conference report today. The bill, carrying the $50 minimum for buck privates and apprentice seamen was passed 359 to 1 several weeks ago.

Mr. Rankin declared he will seek a roll call vote and thus put the membership on record when the conference report is submitted to the House today. A fifth of the legislators present is required to force a roll call.

If Mr. Rankin succeeds the House members will be faced with the alternative of going on record for the lower pay scale or indorsing the extra cost, at which Representative Disney (Democrat), of Oklahome, balked when he stood out alone against the bill before.

Either vote was seen in political quarters as potentially embarrassing to the House members since this entire legislative branch goes on the election block this fall.

Beside raising the Army and Navy base pay scales, the bill increases the salaries of noncommissioned and commissioned officers in the lower brackets. It likewise boosts subsistence allowances generally.

House Passes Bill to Utilize Small Business

By the Associated Press

The House showed yesterday its sympathy for the plight of the "little fellow" in the Nation's economic system, voting 344 to 0 to pass a 200 million dollar measure designed to utilize the facilities of small business for production of war and essential civilian goods.

The unanimous approval sent the measure back to the Senate for a vote on two major House changes, chief of which was a requirement making it virtually mandatory for Government war agencies to award contracts to small enterprises certified as capable of handling them.

The other change doubled the Senate-approved 100 million dollars which would be available as the working capital for a "Smaller War Plants Corporation" for loans to convert small plants to production of essentials in the war program.

In addition, the Smaller War Plants Corporation, which would be set up in the War Production Board, could serve as the prime contractor for Government work, splitting up its assignments among small business.

The mandatory clause inserted in the bill by the House provides that when the chairman of the War Production Board has certified a small concern, or a group of small concerns, as equipped to handle a "specific Government procurement contract," that specific contract must be awarded to that company.

Representative Patman (Democrat) of Texas, chairman of a special House committee which has spent months investigating ways and means of aiding small business, contended the amendment was necessary to "put teeth in the bill."

Opposed to its insertion, however, was Representative Wolcott (Republican) of Michigan, who maintained it might interfere with contract activities on the Army, Navy and Maritime Commission.

Lewis Calls Murray 'Former Friend' in Dramatic Debate

about unity betwixt the United Mine Workers and the C. I. O."

Bitter feelings between partisans of Lewis and Murray broke out Murray was said to have told the miners that if the policy committee decided that the $1,685,000 was a debt, he would recommend to the C. I. O. executive board that it be repaid.

Lewis and Murray debated at length Lewis' proposal of last January that the C. I. O. and A. F. L. resume peace negotiations. Lewis asserted that Murray had called him a Jap. He turned to Murray and was heard to say, "I am not a Jap."

Murray started to rise but several in the audience cried, "Sit down!" Choking with emotion, Murray sardonically called them big, brave, bold men and admonished them not to boo an officer of their union. He then said he would speak later.

In his reply, Murray denied calling Lewis a Jap and said that his comments on Lewis' peace proposal were not intended to reflect on Lewis' patriotism.

Murray was overcome again as he told of serving the United Mine Workers for years. A friend in the audience called out, "Yes, Phil, for years." He said he had not wanted the C. I. O. presidency, but having taken it he was unable to give his exclusive time to the United Mine Workers. He chokingly asked that the miners at least credit him with sincerity.

In a physical encounter early yesterday, Anthony J. Federoff, Pittsburgh C. I. O. director, told newsmen two men attacked him in a hotel lobby, knocked him to the floor and kicked him several times.

Federoff said he did not plan any legal action but said he believed President Lewis should remove the men from the union payroll.

A U. M. W. press release accompanying the statement of financial transactions between the miners ad the C. I. O. said the figures were besed upon the C. I. O.'s "own method of accounting." The $5,569,303 including $1,680,000 in per capita tax payments up to February 1 last; $3,904,303 advanced in the form of "services of executives, field directors trained organizers, attorneys, clerical help and other incidentials;" and $1,685,000 in "negotiated loans," of which $20,000 was itemized as "repaid."

Edison Assails Man Named U. S. Judge

Hearing in Uproar After His Criticism Of Hague Supporter

By Robert De Vore
Post Staff Writer

A room at the Capitol, packed with angry citizens, yesterday became the battleground of forces opposing the New Jersey political machine of Mayor Frank Hague in a bitter, day-long contest over President Roosevelt's appointment of Hague-backed Thomas F. Meaney to a Federal judgeship.

At the head of the anti-Hague forces sat Charles Edison, the former Secretary of the Navy, who became Governor of New Jersey with the help of the President and the mayor, and who assailed Meaney as "a part of and obligated to a sordid political machine."

In the hearing before a Senate Judiciary Subcommittee on Meaney's confirmation, no less than a score of Hague foes either sat as onlookers or raised their voices with Edison in protest against an action which the Governor said would amount to "putting Frank Hague on the Federal bench."

Hague's friends were also present, in equal force and equally vocal.

New Jersey's veteran woman member of the House, Representative Mary Norton, Hague Democrat, glared at Edison and called him "the most arrogant hypocrite."

Edison Called "Hypocrite"

Mrs. Norton clamored for recognition as the Governor finished reading his prepared attack on Hague. Senator Smathers (Democrat), of New Jersey, said she could not be recognized but would be allowed to ask Edison a question.

Mrs. Norton framed her question for about 10 minutes. She said she had listened to Edison with "interest and I may say amazement." Then she recalled how she had gone through the State during Edison's campaign organizing political rallies and how the mayor himself had organized a meeting at Sea Girt in a way to elicit the frank admiration of the candidate.

She quoted Edison as saying after this meeting: "I think Mayor Hague must be a great leader." She said the Governor in other ways exhibited admiration for her "honorable Frank Hague." Mrs. Norton wanted to know what had caused the Governor to change his mind.

"I have never changed my mind about Frank Hague," retorted Edison.

"I think you are the most arrogant hypocrite," countered Mrs. Norton.

Edison recalled telling the Sea Girt gathering, in the presence of Hague, that he would be "beholden" to no man.

Mrs. Norton declared that Edison very well knew he owed his position to Hague. She said: "A man who accepts help from a man for whom he has contempt puts himself in a very peculiar position."

Representative Hart (Hague-Democrat) of New Jersey, arose to charge the Governor with "deliberate deception" of the subcommittee in a letter in which Edison charged that the appointment was "a part in the notorious series of moves in our State that put Frank Hague, jr., a lawyer who had never practiced law, upon our highest court."

Later, Hart charged that Edison was "neither a Republican nor a Democrat." The Governor, he said, "has been a Mugwump during the greater part of his adult career."

Attorney Testifies

Roger Hinds, an attorney who directed the Governor's investigation of the New Jersey Highway Department, testified as a "friend of Roosevelt and Smathers" and a defender of the New Deal since its birth who has had to "take it on the chin" because he happens to live in a Republican community. How, he asked, was he to explain an appointment that "bears the aroma of Hague?"

"You go back and tell them that we are only substituting one Hague man for another," advised Smathers, a candidate for reelection. "Mr. Meaney will make a fine judge."

Smathers asked several protestants why no outcry was made when Thomas G. Walker of Kearny, whom he identified as a Hague man, was appointed to the Federal bench several years ago. Walker's appointment and subsequent resignation, said Smathers, were part of a "shifting of judges" to which Meaney has been accused of being a party.

Eugene E. Agger, New Jersey State banking commissioner, told the committee that Meaney received $20,000 annually for three years as counsel for the liquidator of the closed New Jersey Title Guaranty & Trust Co. He said he thought the salary an "excessive" charge against the bank liquidation. In connection with litigation involving the bank, Meaney also received an additional $10,000, Agger said.

(Edison charged that Meaney was "rewarded" with the bank appointment for resigning as common pleas judge in the alleged shift that made way for Hague's son.)

Following Agger's testimony that deposit withdrawals in the "tens of thousands" shortly before the bank closed in 1939 was 'circumstantial" evidence that "some one" had been "tipped off" about the impending failure, Paul E. Doherty, representing the City Affairs Committee of Jersey City, read into the record a long list of withdrawals by bank officers and directors and other persons who would be expected to have knowledge of the bank's condition.

Meaney, it was testified, failed to take action either against the directors or to recover "privileged" withdrawals. Declared Doherty: "We are of the opinion that such records, standing alone, are sufficient to disqualify Mr. Meaney from the high judicial office he seeks."

Among the anti-Hague forces was Mrs. C. F. Robbins, New Jersey society and civic leader, for whom the Meaney dispute has meant household turmoil. Her cook, she testified, is a Hague adherent with the result that a heretofore peaceful relationship is now marred by political disputes.

Herring, Too

U. S. to Buy Most Canned Salmon

The War Production Board yesterday gave the Army and Navy first call on all the salmon, sardines, mackerel and Atlantic herring to be canned in the United States this year.

Canners were ordered to set aside their entire pack until the armed forces can determine how much of it they will need. If any is left over, it may then be sold to the civilian public.

At the same time, WPB forbade future sales or delivery of 14 types of general industrial equipment—such as elevators, electric motors of more than one horse power, industrial fans, compressors and pumps. An exception was made for repair parts worth less than $1000.

Some Guns are Unfrozen

In two particulars, however, the day's orders relaxed restrictions previously imposed.

Small gauge shotguns, odd caliber rifles, some .22 caliber rifles, and other types of firearms not needed by the armed forces were released for general sale to the public. Stocks of such weapons had been frozen since February 27.

And the board made it possible for farmers and householders to buy wire fencing, poultry netting, fence posts, gates, staples and corrugated roofing, by rescinding previous orders which made them subject to priority ratings. The board explained that these items were in constant use and needed for the maintenance of homes and farms.

The order covering canned fish was issued, it was explained, because of uncertainty as to the size of the 1942 pack.

"It was thought necessary that the entire pack of these fish be set aside," said Lawrence Hopkinson, in charge of fishery products for the WPB. "Then if the full supply is not needed for military and lend-lease requirements, it can be released for civilian purposes."

Production Estimates Made

He estimated the 1942 salmon pack at 5,400,000 cases. Of this, 2,500,000 cases probably will be required by the Government. Lend-lease requirements were estimated at 66 per cent of the year's pack of sardines, Atlantic herring and mackerel.

Procedure was established under which each packer must make a weekly report to WPB as to the quantity of fish canned. If after 30 days, this is not taken by the Government, it may be released for sale to civilians.

"It is not anticipated that in most cases canners will actually be requred to hold their fish for 60 days, since purchasing can be accomplished in a much shorter time," Hopkinson said.

President Signs FHA Loan Increase

President Roosevelt approved yesterday legislation increasing from 300 million to 800 million dollars the amount of loans the Federal Housing Authority may insure for the construction of housing for defense workers. The bill also raised from 20 to 25 years the period during which loans may be repaid.

Mrs. Norton Calls Edison 'Hypocrite'

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

VERBAL BATTLE AT SENATE HEARING—Gov. Charles Edison of New Jersey (1) was accused by Representative Mary T. Norton (2), chairman of the New Jersey State Democratic Committee, of being a "hypocrite" for "accepting the help of Mayor Hague" in his election campaign. They are pictured at the Senate Judiciary Committee hearing yesterday on the appointment of Thomas F. Meaney as a United States District Court judge for New Jersey. Edison protested the appointment, charging that it would, in effect, be "putting Frank Hague on the Federal bench"

Navy Modifies Marriage Curbs

Marriage restrictions were modified yesterday as the Navy sought enlistment of 10,000 additional college juniors, seniors and graduates for reserve midshipman training.

The Bureau of Naval Personnel announced that for the first time enlistment of qualified college graduates who are married will be accepted. College juniors and seniors still must be unmarried to be accepted, the Navy emphasized. The age limit for reserve midshipmen training remains from 19 to 28 years.

Girl Denies Slaying Guilt, Tells of Love, in Court Drama

By the Associated Press

New York, May 26.—Madeline Webb played the leading role today in a drama far more tense than any she could have imagined in her thwarted theatrical career, as she protested her innocence in the strangulation-slaying of Mrs. Flora Susan Reich.

The dark-haired young woman from Stillwater, Okla., acknowledged she had lived with Eli Shonbrun, one of the co-defendants, since last July, that their possessions were meager, their existence a bare one, that she loved him still, but declared she had not lured Mrs. Reich to her death as the State charged.

Miss Webb, Shonbrun and John Cullen, the almost forgotten third defendant, are charged with the first-degree murder of Mrs. Reich, a wealthy Polish refugee, in the Hotel Sutton suite where the State said Miss Webb and Shonbrun lived as Mr. and Mrs. Ted Leopold.

Not in Room, She Says

Also indicted in the case is Murray Hirschl, Shonbrun's uncle, who will be tried separately. Hirschl, testifying for the State, pinned the crime on Miss Webb, Shonbrun and Cullen.

Shonbrun assented he and Hirschl killed the woman and that neither Miss Webb nor Cullen had anything to do with it.

Miss Webb asserted she was not in the Hotel Sutton suite on March 4 when Mrs. Reich was bound and gagged and left to die after a diamond had been ripped from her hand.

She had never, she said, been party to any discussion with Shonbrun, Cullen and Hirschl regarding "the luring of someone to the hotel to kill for the purpose of robbery."

Miss Webb testified she left the suite between 11:30 a. m. and noon on March 4. The State says Mrs. Reich was slain about 1:20 p. m. The witness recalled that Hirschl was in the suite that morning, but was unable to fix the time, and was not sure whether he was there when she left.

Married for a Year

Under questioning by James Springer, a former judge from Stillwater who has known Miss Webb since she was a child and is here to assist in her defense, Miss Webb said she was graduated from Oklahoma A. and M. College when she was 19.

She said she was married for about a year to a man she met at school, and was then divorced.

Miss Webb said she came to New York because she had been offered two jobs. She said she rejected the first offer from a World's Fair show, but later appeared at "Gay New Orleans," a fair concession.

She met Shonbrun through mutual friends, she said, adding they had frequent engagements and subsequently lived together.

She nodded an emphatic "yes" when asked if she were in love with Shonbrun.

Posturing and pouting like a child and seemingly unaware of the seriousness of her predicament, Miss Webb again and again launched into speeches which were cut short, wherever possible, by objections from Assistant District Attorney Jacob Grumet, the prosecutor, and by admonitions from the judge.

"I didn't run away from the Sutton," she stated scornfully, pounding the ledge of the witness box. "I never ran away in my life."

"My life is an open book," she declaimed, with her hand on her heart, "and I would have given myself up, Mr. Grumet, if you had waited 30 minutes before you arrested me. I'd have come down to your office with Mr. Buitenkant (the chief defense lawyer)."

"I'd been taking aspirin," the witness continued, talking through prosecution objections. "I was trying to get some sleep so I could talk to you better."

Family Honor at Stake

Grumet continued his cross-examination evenly.

"But you didn't come down to see me, did you, Miss Webb?" he asked.

Madeline half rose from the witness chair and said in a tense voice:

"I would have come down. The honor of my name, the honor of my mother, my father, my people, was at stake and I would have come down."

During this speech Judge Jonah J. Goldstein was pounding the bench with his gavel. He leaned over to the witness and ordered:

"Don't try to compete with the gavel, Miss Webb. You are supposed to answer questions, not volunteer speeches."

"He can question me all night so far as I'm concerned," said Miss Webb, "but the questions he asks, Judge Goldstein."

G. O. P. Leader Freed of Mail Fraud Count

By the Associated Press

Detroit, May 26.—A Federal Court jury freed Frank D. McKay and seven codefendants of one mail fraud indictment today and defense attorneys said they would move at once for dismissal of another, second of three involving the Republican National Committeeman.

United States District Judge Shackelford Miller, jr., of Louisville, Ky., assigned to the case after the original trial on the first indictment ended in a jury disagreement, said he would receive the dismissal plea tomorrow. The second indictment charges McKay with using the mails to defraud Edsel B. Ford, president of the Ford Motor Co., of $9918 in connection with the 1938 Republican campaign of the late Gov. Frank D. Fitzgerald.

A jury of six men and six women, deliberating a little more than three hours, declared in returning its verdict of innocent of four counts of mail fraud that the Government "had not proved its case."

McKay, treasurer of Michigan from 1925 to 1930 and long prominent in State and national politics, and the seven defendants were accused of conspiring to defraud liquor distillers doing business with the State of $500,000 through the sale of "political influence." The defense, which did not call any witnesses, charged a "political conspiracy" promoted the indictment.

The indictment, returned in November, 1940, contained eight counts. Judge Miller dismissed four of the counts and quashed charges against three original defendants.

Acquitted in addition to McKay were William H. McKeighan, former Flint mayor; Fred C. Ehrmann, secretary of the Michigan Liquor Control Commission during the two Fitzgerald administrations; John H. Marolf of Iron Mountain; Fisher L. Layton of Flint, Earl J. Williams, Charles Leiter and Isadore Schwartz, all of Detroit.

McKay also is charged in a third mail fraud indictment with manipulating bidding on a $2,225,000 bond issue with which the city of Grand Rapids financed construction of a water pipeline from Lake Michigan.

Congress Gets Proposal to Give D. C. School Site

A draft of a bill which would give the District a nine-acre school site on what was once Friendship estate—now a Government housing project—was forwarded to Congress yesterday by Chairman Frederic A. Delano of the National Capital Parks and Planning Commission.

The proposed bill involves no cost to either the District or the Federal Government, but calls for an even swap—the District to exchange a plot of the same size at Arizona and Massachusetts Avenues Northwest for the Friendship site.

Delano, in a letter accompanying the draft, explained that the proffered site, which also would provide space for a playground, was more centrally located and convenient to the area which it would serve.

He said that the Defense Homes Corporation, owner of the land, had agreed to the deal.

Ringside Table

With Mary Harris

"THE SHOW MUST GO ON," adage of good troupers, is valiantly illustrated at the Lotus. Young Hale Hamilton, who puts on a fine unicycle act, is taking the place of his father, the senior Hale Hamilton, who died unexpectedly last week after he had been booked for the Lotus. Hale and his sister, Beverly, now the entire Hale Hamilton act, are doing a splendid job in the best tradition of show business. Which is as their father would have had it . . . New at the Lotus, too, are Dancers Douglas and Jane. The Tom Ball Dancers are whisking out in fresh novelties.

Arthur Warren and his orchestras, suavely playing favorites of the smoother New York sector, will be on the bandstand at the Starlight Roof opening on Friday. Breezy news from breezy Starlight is that there'll be no cover there this summer.

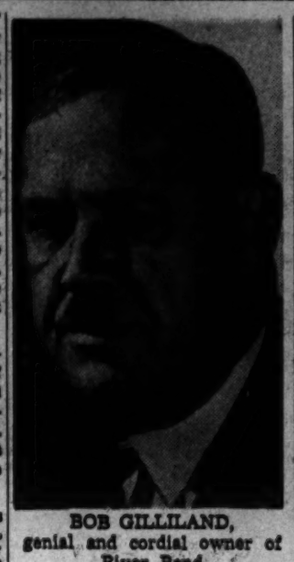
WHAT'S NEW. Bandleader Les Brown, now in the Victory Room, has a fresh singing ace in 19-year-old Jack Carroll, of Newark, who made his vocal debut with the Brown band on Sunday afternoon. Jack was nervous, but his voice wasn't . . . Publicist Joe Deupree of the Shoreham vows they have something new in hand-balancing acts. It seems that Martez and De Lita do their stunts to rumba time and in rumba costumes . . . Paul Kain's Glen Echo Band now has two aviators. One is Maestro Paul, the other is Saxist Jimmy Nichols who has just received his pilot's license . . . Ward DuVall, who's been subbing for Guitarist Keith Jones at Merry-Land, is also a dramatic tenor, will make his concert debut in Baltimore this week.

LAST PICKENS SISTER is Jane who'll arrive in Del Rio next week. The Boy with the Bow broke up the famous Pickens Sisters of the radio,—Grace married John T. Cahill, U. S. District Attorney; Patti is the wife of Singer Robert Simmons and Helen is Mrs. Salvatore M. Cuvioni. Which leaves Jane as the only Pickens holdout on Cupid.

The Metronome Room will close for the summer on Saturday when all its fans will say a fond au 'voir to Layton Bailey and his orchestra who've played there for a solid eight months.

MUSICAL ROMPS. "Paran Pan Pin," the Havana hit song being done with mucho "oomph" in Restaurant "400" by the Ortiz Trio . . . That uncanny blend of "Little Egypt" and "Turkey in the Straw" by El Patio's irrepressible Four Toppers. Makes you think of a county fair . . . "Send Me One Dozen Roses," a Park Avenue hillbilly song, if there ever was one, especially as played by Pete Macias' band in Lounge Riviera . . . Jack Neal's able toying with "Twelfth Street Rag" in Hi-Hat . . . And what Milton Davis's Rainbow Room orchestra does to that prime oldie, "Honeysuckle Rose" . . . You'll enjoy the whirl given to "Babalu" by Singer Sid Owen at Crossroads, especially when he tosses in those Caribbean yodels . . . When you drop into the Copacabana don't miss asking Juan Velasquez' rumba band to play "Four Corn Fields."

A FOUR GENERATION PARTY will be celebrated in the Pall Mall Room on Friday when Mr. and



BOB GILLILAND, genial and cordial owner of River Bend

Mrs. Lee Best will entertain in honor of the birthday of her father, Charles Thue. Also in the party will be Mr. Thue's granddaughter, Mrs. Luse of Cleveland, and great-granddaughter, 4-year-old Joy Luse . . . You know Lee Best as night manager at O'Donnell's. And Mrs. Best is the food manager of the Burlington Hotel.

"Jivin' Jack" Schaffer of the Casino Royal has added a group of songs by Don Carper, who held forth at Cafe Caprice last season, to his collection of enjoyably improper ditties.

GARDEN OF GIRLS. Dorothy Hutcheson, sweet and debonair, is the new Mayfair pianist . . . Violinist Jane Marlow of Restaurant "22" is wearing a bracelet carrying the insignia of the Army Air Corps . . . Accordionist Beverly Stull is now well into her second year at Burt's Trans-Lux . . . Alla Moscova, lovely mistress of ceremonies at the Balalaika, is the wife of Vava Bajon of the spot's orchestra . . . Singer Allison Andrews of the Mayflower Lounge wears a circa 1905 locket that holds the pictures of her sisters.

OF PATRONS. Army officers predominate in the afternoon crowd at Lee's Stables, hold regular conclaves in the smaller room . . . Around midnight the King Cole Room is always full of quiet couples who like to sit in dim corners and listen to Eve Knight sing romantically . . . Solid businessmen who appreciate prime steaks are the mainstay of Olmstead's Grill . . . The most smartly dressed women in town always seem to show up for luncheon at La Salle du Bois which might well be nicknamed "Little Park Avenue."

"CHICKEN SHRIMP," a delicacy new to Washington, is to be a Neptune Room specialty. Only giant shrimp are used, so big that after cooking they look like chicken drumsticks.

Dealers Ask U. S. To Buy 6000 Cars

Urge Relaxation Of Rationing While Stock Deteriorates

Government officials have before them today a demand that they purchase from retail dealers 6000 cars valued at 10 million dollars that are now fast deteriorating in open storage, or garages.

Washington dealers, through the National Auto Dealers Association, are asking Uncle Sam to take over 4500 cars and release the other 1500 for public sale. According to President Robert L. Lewis, of the local group, the only response to the request has been a promise to relax general buying restrictions.

Lewis points out that the Government has taken over most of the warehouse facilities in the area, forcing dealers to store their cars the best they can—fender to bumper—on any place they can find. He states further, that when the restriction on the sale of new cars was put into effect last January, local dealers were left holding the bag with 6000 1942 models.

Only 300 Sold

Only about 300 of these new cars had been disposed of, under the present rationing program, at the end of March. At this rate, he states, the available cars would not be disposed of until they had outworn their usefulness.

Sale of the RFC for cost, plus 1 per cent per month since January 1, 1942, is permitted in the recent Murray-Patman act. Autos still in dealers hands on July 1, 1943, may be sold for retail price plus 12 per cent, according to President Lewis.

Vacant lots on Old Bladensburg Road and in Virginia are being used by the dealers for storing their cars. They point out this type of storage deteriorates them quickly; paint peels, tires rot, wheels get out of alignment, and depreciation runs as high as 40 per cent a year.

Meanwhile, motorists who have been irked by the tedious wait to get ration cards for gas and tires, will find the situation alleviated next Monday, when nine new rationing branch offices will be opened.

Gives D. C. 15 Offices

Together with the six now operating, including headquarters at 1740 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest, the rationing board will have 15 offices located in various sections of the District.

The locations are as follows: Tempo Building, Fourteenth Street and Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest; Force School, 1740 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest; old building, 458 Indiana Avenue Northwest; Jackson School, R Street between Thirtieth and Thirty-First Northwest; Oyster School, Twenty-ninth and Calvert Streets Northwest; library, Sixteenth and Lamont Streets Northwest; library, Georgia Avenue and Upshur Streets Northwest; Brightwood School, Georgia Avenue and Quackenbos Street Northwest; Brookland School, Tenth Street and Monroe Street Northeast; Library, Seventh and D Streets Southeast; Hayes School, Fifth and K Streets Northeast; Langdon School, Twentieth and Evarts Streets Northeast; Library, Seventh and Eye Streets Southwest; Ketcham School, Fifteenth Street and Good Hope Road Southeast, and another to be located in Benning, the address to be announced the latter part of the week.

Asphalt Released For Md. Road Work

Special Dispatch to The Post

Hagerstown, Md., May 26.—About a third of the asphalt needed for the highway resurfacing program in the Sixth Road District, embracing Garrett, Allegany, Washington and Frederick Counties, has been released to the State Roads Commission.

Only the most necessary part of the program, including main arteries of travel, will be done this year. Resumption of resurfacing in Frederick County began yesterday. Four miles of the National Highway on Sideling Hill Mountain will be done early in June. About 21 miles of road scheduled for oiling and chipping will not be done.

Roads commission headquarters for this district said that some damage was done to highways in Western Maryland by last week's torrential rains. The heaviest damage was to shoulders on the Liberty Road, near Unionville, where an inch and a half rain fell in 20 minutes.

Wartime Nurseries

Our Chest agencies' decision to open their nursery facilities at moderate rates to children of working parents in addition to children whose care is already provided for without charge is a wise measure in defense. If women are to enter offices and industries to supplement and replace men, some provision must be made for the daytime supervision of their children. This supervision must be responsible, but it must not be so burdensome financially as to discourage women who might otherwise be useful in our war effort from holding jobs where they are needed. Although Washington has many privately run schools, many of these charge high fees and are not conveniently located. Opening of the seven settlement houses to use by those who cannot get this service elsewhere will be welcomed by many working mothers, widows as well as wives.

Less WPA

Only a month ago the President was turning on the critics of nonwar expenditures and demanding to be shown how they could be made. Now he has himself picked on the WPA. In the message to Congress on Monday, the President cut the proposed work relief appropriation for the next fiscal year from the 465 million dollars asked in the budget message to 280 million dollars. This is sizable pruning, and corresponds with the realities of our present economic situation, which is already showing signs of labor shortages.

Work relief, as the President said, must be confined to those who cannot obtain employment either in war activities or other work. There must be very few who cannot be employed in some capacity or other. As more and more men are absorbed into the fighting services and into war production, the need for persons who were hitherto regarded—by themselves or the authorities—as unemployable is growing. The need is so great that the WPA ought to be abolished altogether. But the President prefers to keep up not only this organization, but the CCC and the NYA as well. If it be contended that these latter bodies have already been stripped of all save strictly war activities, why cannot they be carried on under a unified management? That would make for efficiency and save money.

However, the savings on WPA as indicated by the President are welcome. At a time when the citizenry are expected to sacrifice to the limit, Government should give the lead in economy, just as it should give the lead in conversion to war.

Saving On Deliveries

Most of the milk distributors serving the New York metropolitan area have agreed to deliver milk every other day instead of daily, to cut out "repeat" deliveries, and even to exchange customers and routes. The arrangement is expected to reduce mileage about 25 per cent. In view of the urgent need for conserving rubber and gas, it hardly seems likely that either the Department of Justice or the Office of Defense Transportation will object to the contemplated curtailment of delivery services.

The pooling of equipment for commercial distribution ought to be encouraged not only in the case of milk but also in that of many other articles. It ought to be encouraged not merely as a war measure, but also as a means of cutting normal distribution costs. For competition has resulted in unnecessary and extravagant outlays for speeding goods to customers. Fearful of losing trade, many firms, at considerable cost, deliver small purchases that the customer ought either to carry or else pay a fee to have delivered. They also meet unreasonable demands for "repeat" service resulting from the carelessness and inconsiderateness of customers.

This kind of imposition can only be stopped through a general agreement of competitors to follow certain standard practices. The resultant restraint of trade might, of course, proceed to the point of unreasonableness, if distributors were subjected to no sort of official supervision. But there appears to be no such danger in the present instance. While consumers may suffer some inconvenience, that is unavoidable under present conditions. In the long run systematized plans for conservation of the materials that keep goods moving from the store to the home will make for more and better service than would otherwise be possible.

When the war is over, we hope that some at least of the distributive economies forced upon us by necessity will remain and find reflection in the lowered prices of milk and other delivered products.

Winning The Peace

Preoccupation with the problems of peace after victory may seem a trifle premature in the light of the facts of our war situation. Yet such a preoccupation is never amiss. After the last war, as a cynic put it, peace "broke out," and the deflation of war activity left a permanent core of unemployment. Men may differ as to the extent to which the joblessness and insecurity of the postwar years contributed to the present war. But that they were factors, none can doubt. And so it is the duty of statesmanship to be thinking of a transition from war to peace which will keep up full employment.

That is what is preoccupying Milo Perkins in the intervals of prosecuting the war as executive director of the Board of Economic Welfare. The fruit of his thinking was given on Monday to the Swarthmore students in a commencement address., Mr. Perkins wished primarily to get rid of the lack of faith in the postwar future. The emphasis is entirely proper. Too many people, seeing the extent to which we are converting ourselves to war activity, are inclined to throw up their hands over the unwinding process. But, as Mr. Perkins says, we shall come out of this war with all the constituents for a vast improvement in our living standard. We shall have the greatest production of raw materials, the greatest industrial plant and the greatest number of skilled workers in all history. And such a combination will be all ready at hand to fill needs which in our country as well as every other will be equally tremendous.

To unite supply with demand will be a problem of organization. But organization by whom? Many Americans, anxious to bring about the demobilization of government along with war activity, may look askance at Mr. Perkins' suggestion that the responsibility for maintaining full employment rests upon governments. We do not share that skepticism. The continuance of government enterprise to win the peace as well as the war is inevitable. Whole peoples will need to be rescued from starvation and disease. War-scarred areas must be reconstructed. When this war is over, many countries will be poised precariously on the brink of civil commotion. A firm and helping hand must be available immediately, and it can be extended only by the governments of the victorious Allies in concert. Indeed, all the combined government controls which have been enlisted in prosecution of the war will be needed long after the shooting is over.

But that is looking only at the aftermath of war. How about the thereafter? Mr. Perkins as a convinced New Dealer foresees the government firmly established as the responsible agent for insuring continuously full employment. We need not be New Dealers to agree that from now on governments will have a social and economic responsibility to see that our resources are fully employed. But there is room for considerable disagreement on the manner and the limits of government intervention. If, as Mr. Perkins says, government should merely provide the "environment" for the expansion of private enterprise, well and good. But in the recent prewar past government enterprise has been just as much bent upon restricting and even supplanting private enterprise as upon stimulating it. The result was to retard our postdepression recovery, and to congeal the core of unemployment.

Mr. Perkins is not so much concerned, he says, with blueprints. But it will depend altogether upon the kind of policies we pursue after the war whether we can achieve the permanent prosperity which he envisages. Private enterprise can still achieve miracles if by wise tax and other policies it is given a chance to be enterprising. We need works as well as faith to bring about the more perfect peace which is often said to be the object of war.

Before Requisitioning

No doubt the time might possibly come when it will be necessary to requisition the passenger cars now in private use. At any rate, this is the prospect held out by Arthur B. Newhall, coordinator for rubber in the WPB. But before any such step gets beyond the talking stage, the authorities might well consider the need for moving our unused stocks of new passenger cars out of the dealers' hands. These cars number around 650,000. They are, of course, a valuable stockpile. But, if they remain out of use for long, we shall find that we have been saving a fast depreciating stockpile, in automobile parts as well as rubber. Moreover, the cars are costing the taxpayers money that might well be saved.

New passenger cars in dealers' possession were frozen on January 1. Reimbursement at cost plus 1 per cent a month for holding charges is provided for the dealers under the Murray-Patman bill. That is handsome compensation. But it is only the beginning of the problem from the public standpoint. Upon the dealers is put the onus of storage, and in a good many cities, especially in the defense areas, storage space is at a premium. In the District, for instance, there are frozen cars parked wheel to wheel in open lots, and no amount of upkeep could offset the depreciation to which they are thus subjected.

To be sure, under rationing orders these cars are in course of gradual release. But the figures for the first quarter show that only a dribble is getting into circulation. In the District, for instance, out of 6000 frozen new cars, only 300 were released. The number for March was eactly 87. If this situation is typical for the entire country, the use value of our stockpile of new passenger cars will be very much impaired.

In addition to the new cars, of course, there are probably three times as many used cars in the hands of dealers. Here is a stock of three million cars out of which we could easily solve the problem of insuring transport for our war workers and yet have enough to spare for other war purposes. This is not to say that private cars may not be needed. But we must not forget the cars already in hand—cars which are getting more valuable every day in cost to the taxpayer at the same time as they are getting less valuable from the standpoint of use.

Kharkov Seesaw

So far there is nothing to substantiate the German claim that a considerable Russian force has been encircled south of Kharkov and faces annihilation. Such claims have been made by the German high command at repeated intervals in the past only to be belied by the realities. The Russians insist, in fact, that the German offensive in the Izum-Barvenkova sector south of Kharkov has been stopped, while they themselves continue to make progress in their assault on Kharkov.

What is most probable is that for the time being, the fighting in the Kharkov region has become a war of position, with neither side capable of exerting sufficient force to bring about a fundamental alteration in existing lines. Should this state of affairs continue for any length of time, the advantage would all be with the Russians. For, unless and until the German forces under Von Bock succeed in driving back the Red Army now encamped in the vicinity of Kharkov, any plans that Hitler may have entertained for a large-scale offensive on the Caucasus would have to be postponed. With time no longer on his side, such a postponement in the long run could be fatal to him.

What is not yet clear, however, is that the Russians have sufficient strength to hold the Germans in the Kharkov area, even if they are prevented from moving forward, or that the Germans have exerted all the force they are still capable of exerting to smash the Russian lines.

What's In A Name

What shall we call our military engines of destruction? Shall we call them merely tanks, or machine guns, or artillery? Or shall we coin new labels that will convey some idea of the speed and wallop packed by American materiel? The Armored Force Journal is strongly in favor of displacing "Panzer" and similar words of enemy origin with more appropriate Americanisms. In fact, the Journal is reported to have offered a prize to enlisted men in the armored force who produce really graphic native labels. This is all to the good. The English language is flexible and American ingenuity is proverbial. Whoever wins the prize will have to deserve it!

But it does seem to us that the Journal is a little off base in requiring symbols of dread. "What," it asks, "flashes in your mind when you hear the roar of motors, the rumble of tons of steel rolling over the ground, the staccato beat of thousands of machine guns?" The question, we venture to predict, will stump even the most articulate. Americans, to be sure, now have a healthy respect for mechanized warfare. But the more they have learned of it, the less superficially respectful they have become of its individual weapons.

This is manifested particularly in the matter of names. Consider, for example, that lethal brew known as a Molotov cocktail. An innocuous name—but what a kick! No, we think the Journal is on the wrong track in emphasizing dread. What we need are some pungent, eminently disrespectful Americanisms. Peeps and jeeps will do for a starter.

CONFESSION

Below the Golden Spears gleamed bay and sea
And we were all alone with summer where Fronds waved against our lazy sky.
"Tell me you love me, dear," I begged. Not she;
Yet gave her lips. Lovely with laughter their Hesitant kiss, fleeting and shy—
Too light to bear love's burthen.
Suddenly
I teased no more, and quiet filled the air
Save for one drifting seagull's cry.
Under my hand her heart's leap answered me.

Barge Transport

Waste of opportunity is just as bad as the more corrupt or material cause of neglect. Each day we pick up the papers expecting to see some distruction of our shipping on the Atlantic Seaboard, and it seems that we never fail to see what we are looking for. The seriousness of such is reflected to an unsual extent in the thought of each and every one of us as well as in the newspapers and in the official attention of the Government.

We have an inland waterway extending from the mouth of the Mississippi River to Pittsburgh and Wheeling. Why not build one, two or three thousand barges and ship our oil and gasoline to such convenient points where it can be distributed in the East by short hauls without any inconvenience or danger.

These barges could be made of wood and their building would in no way conflict with the material used in the emergency. On the contrary it would effect a great saving as a large majority of the ships destroyed are tankers and we have to replace them with valuable material which can be used in other constructions important to Government needs.

Speed and economy is all in the favor of such action as we can overcome such objections or handicaps by enlarging the fleet of barges so as to keep a steady flow of oil to the East where it can be used or shipped to England at the discretion of the Government.

Air Transport

About a year ago in talks with a young lawyer who is interested in the promotion of postwar aviation, this writer predicted that the time would come when both unhampered private enterprise and administrative Government would find the necessity for development of aircraft freighters for both war and peacetime transportation purposes. The events that have transpired since that prediction was made have shown that the writer was right. Submarine menace to ocean transports is the reason that America's war leaders are now giving more careful thought to the possibilities of shipping materials by air. It can be done. All that we need is the will to plan and then go ahead with the building of larger aircraft by which we can ship these materials. If ocean shippers can only be made to see the importance of cooperating with the men of vision in Government and in the unhampered enterprises engaged in air transportation, then no obstacle will stand in the way of carrying out this new era plan. There must be some way to tie up the investment placed in ocean travel with air travel and air transportation. This can be done by pooling the resources of each into one whole under Government supervision and Government financial aid, if the latter is necessary.

Official Fumbling Deters War Effort

Five reasons why my morale is bad:

1. The fire-gasoline muddle. OPA and everybody else proves conclusively that we must take drastic steps to cut down rubber and gas use. Do we take drastic steps? Oh no, we have loose, honor-system gas rationing over a part of the country. Two of my friends who use cars neither in work nor to go to work get B-3 cards, and Mr. Henderson says it is all right for them to save their gas for pleasure, but the guys with A cards better watch out or they will get cut to 2 gallons a week. Is this drastic rubber conservation, or am I dreaming?

2. The car-requisitioning hocuspocus, or, gee, how tough we bureaucrats can get. Twice a week, regular as clockwork, some breathless genius sounds off on this point, sending used-car prices and buyers to a new low. Only about one out of four of these miracle men seems to realize that the lots are full of cars patiently awaiting purchasers, and that the A-card lists are full of people who would gladly stop using gas and tires if they could find buyers at fair prices. I'm one of them, and I wish these guys would either requisition or shut up.

3. The rose-colored glasses, or please, pretty voters, don't let us down this fall. The White House says the shipping problem is well under control. The Army and Navy say everyhting is jake. The next day five columnists call attention to the submarine loss figures appearing at the foot of page 5. The third day the President says it is all a mistake, and please don't get optimistic yet, anybody. The fourth day it appears that it will be a long war, after all, or was it all an optical illusion?

4. Stop inflation, or letting Leon hold the bag. Wages must not go up; wages must not be frozen; wages must be stabilized. Does that mean wages must not go up? No, not necessarily. Inflationary gap must be narrowed, says Henry the Morg. How, Henry? By taxes and savings. Higher taxes, Henry? Well, a little higher. Compulsory savings? Oh, heavens, no. Lower exemptions? Just a wee bit lower. So the gap gets narrowed 7 billion, mostly out of the pockets of those who don't spend their income on commodities anyway, nothing is done to prevent further widening through voluntary wage increases to those who have the new-found purchasing power, and the President recommends 10-20-30 per cent increases for Federal workers under guise of overtime. Next day President says unjustified wage increases must stop. When?

5. Who's running war housing now, or come back, Mr. Palmer. President merges all housing agencies into one, to eliminate confusion, duplication and cross-hauling. Ninety days later two divisions of WPA and one late of WPB are trying for peculiar and not impersonal reasons of their own to build themselves up to take war housing control from the new super-agency, and Army and Maritime Commission are playing with the idea of building war housing for their personnel and shipyard workers all by themselves. Poor NHA thought the President meant it had control, showing how silly it is to believe an executive order.

All of the above, Mr. Editor, is an account of official fumbling, of not proceding directly to doing jobs that need to be done, of permitting bureaucracy as usual, of encouraging politics as usual, and of letting all the loose-brains operate as usual. We've got to get tough, Mr. Editor, we've got to get streamlined for action. When do we start?

Raising Pay

Although we have lately read much of wage and price ceilings to prevent inflation, it is now proposed (and apparently with very high authority) to put through a bill to raise the salaries of Federal employes $300 a year. In the aggregate this will be a huge amount. Will it not, therefore, result in an equally huge increase in buying power and promote the danger of inflation?

A bill is already in Congress to increase salaries of District employes, although one reads there is no money available to meet the proposed change.

All this being so, who is going to ask for $300 per annum raises for the thousands of workers who are not on Federal or District payrolls? We are in a war for freedom and everyone wishes to help as much as possible, but to raise salaries of only Federal employes would seem to be grossly unfair to the balance of the Nation's workers who are the bulk of the country's taxpayers when all is said and done.

Also, Federal employes, except in a few instances, are secure, with good pensions for old age. Hundreds of thousands of other workers have no claims on Social Security at all and cannot earn enough to provide adequately for themselves when when they must retire. Should there not be some way to look after the needs of all citizens and not simply one or two preferred groups?

Government Freezing

It is significant that many of our political leaders who have high praise for the American Constitution as long as they are talking about "freedom of speech" and "freedom of assembly" let their voices trail into nothingness when they come to that section of the Constitution which prohibits the taking of a man's property without compensation.

What difference is there between outright seizure of a man's property and a governmental order prohibiting a tire dealer from disposing of his stock in hand. Thousands of small filling station operators have had their goods frozen on their shelves. Their expenses (and their taxes) go merrily on. No one group should have to bear a disproportionate share of the cost of fighting the rubber shortage. If the Government needs the tires and tubes for war use it should buy them outright. If it desires to freeze them for essential services later on it should take title to them and pay for them now. It should not confiscate in effect while avoiding the financial responsibility of its course.

Making Room

Your editorial in today's Post about "Compulsory Billeting" is very good. There are a lot of small-caliber officials who are in their glory when they can tell other people what they "must" do. There are undoubtedly a lot of comfortable unused rooms in private homes in Washington whose owners do not need the income but which might be offered to warworkers if they were assured by the powers that be that roomers who proved to be undesirable might be gotten rid of without a lot of trouble in going to court, etc. As long as home owners are faced with that possibility there are unused rooms which will not be offered.

The Post Impressionist

Among The Bookstacks

"Her bedroom was a cot behind the bookstacks; her closet a few hangers surrounded by bookshelves." For a moment the newspaper phrases were annoying, like some shriveled little gossip of New England or Iowa. They seemed to peer through the chinks of the bookstacks, to squint along the dusty tops of the old books, to spy on a life that was open and clear to any honest glance. But then they changed to a symbol, not of a life shut in by the rows of books, but to a symbol of life as world wide as the titles and names on the shelves, as timeless as those names; but to a symbol of life not bound between covers of books.

How Carrie Weaver Smith's laughter rang out as she brought back, to the small group reading together in her cozy sitting room, a note she had found on her desk. It said: "I will come to see you again in two years."

"Honestly," she would say, "this running a book shop— There is nothing I would trade it for! The people it brings to you, the adventure, the insight—" Her friends would smile at one another, their secret understanding that it was the adventure and insight of her spirit that were the magnets.

Not all who dropped by were en route to India. There was a piano tuner who arrived, on the eve of a songfest, just sober enough to scatter the keyboard and parts of her piano all over the shop, but quite too drunk to fit them back again. A young athlete helped her support the Humpty Dumpty tuner down the stairs, and another tuner dropped the job he was on and arrived posthaste to fit the parts into place.

Virtual strangers would borrow small sums, enough for lodging or food, disappear for more than a year and return to pay the debt, with perhaps a box of candy for interest. There was one Christmas Eve made holler for a score of homeless or lonely by the open house she and her sister kept, when friends and strangers sang carols together. A woman, proud of being "one of Dr. Smith's alumnae," brought her children especially to meet the woman who had redirected her life along a road that led to a happy and distinguished marriage. A couple of negro girls startled a trolley full of passengers by jumping from their seats to offer her a place; as significant as the lovely radiance of their faces was the deep courtesy of her quiet warm response to them, her spontaneous delight in meeting them again. Her smile would turn as shy as a child's smile when she was moved by some expression of love or admiration for herself. She never got over her amazement that people should like her.

Those numerous persons who liked her, for reasons that they all understood even though she could not, included not only the unfortunate, but the everyday, and the famous. On a gray afternoon the dean of American poetry, Robert Frost, was brought in by his daughter Lesley to greet her. Wearied from a tight schedule of appointments, he relaxed in her old morris chair, sipping at a stein of hot milk, chatting for three golden hours. His keen mind caught up the casual topics, turning each like a prism so that the light glinted from its facets. The gray room took on a fine human warmth, a sparkle of running humor, a certain spiritual lustre.

Her child smile could be impish as well as shy or wistful. A persistent knock summoned her one Sunday morning, a period reserved for herself. Hair dripping from a shampoo, she wound a towel about her head and opened the door, to see a new customer who had called for a book ordered by telephone. "I always wanted to meet a member of the Supreme Court," she greeted him, "but I didn't expect to have my hair down when it happened."

There were many gatherings in her shop, some of which taxed the capacity of the rooms where ancient and modern masters of divergent philosophies had learned to hobnob on the shelves. Among those stacks lovers of the world's great mystic poetry heard it discussed and read by Katherine Lenroot. On another evening Gabrielle Mistral, probably the greatest living South American poet, recited her own poems and expounded her theories of poetry and life. There the wife of the President of the United States read the "Christ-Carol," aloud, and her own Christmas story for children was read by another guest. The Poet Librarian of Congress, and an Oriental scholar who had been born in a desert tent, an Englishman who knew Alice in Wonderland on this side of the looking-glass, and poets like Ridgely Torrance, like Padraic Colum, like Floyd Dell, like others as unlike as poets should be—all these and many others brought their messages.

From the bookshop owner, but outside her shop, groups of university people learned about Emily Dickinson and Robert Browning, more than they had learned in college. These two had been her enthusiasms almost a lifetime; books in general had been her hobby for years before they became a means of livelihood.

Her heart, childlike in its impulsiveness, its gentleness and candor, had a warrior's courage. She fought for the rights of girls carelessly labeled "bad," firmly believing that there are no "bad" girls in the irremediable sense of the ugly little word. When she saw the chance she had built for them being destroyed she would not let their case rest. Social experts who knew she was right rallied to testify for her. Records were distorted, innocent facts were twisted by false interpretations. With sensitive honesty too deep for the clever to fathom, she was hurt; but too strong to be destroyed.

Now her memorial is written in many lives, some of them transformed in her "reform" schools; numerous others enlarged and strengthened there among the bookstacks. Because the Readers Book Shop had her as the owner. "Far, far better to live in a life than to live in a name!"

Business Leadership

By Ernest Lindley

War Gives It Second Wind

WAR PRODUCTION is giving the American industrial manager the opportunity not only to recover his prestige but to win new laurels. Miracles of production are being performed daily. Many plants and some whole industries are getting their first chance to go all-out on production. The Government will take all they can turn out and is demanding more and more. This is a paradise for the man whose main interest is in making things better and faster and in larger quantities.

LINDLEY

Wiser business leaders realize that this is their chance to win back the respect with which they were generally once held. Or, as some of them put it, this is the chance to prove the efficiency of private enterprise. Actually, this is not a test of private enterprise, in the economic sense in which the phrase ordinarily is used. It is not private enterprise, but Government orders, which are impelling American production toward record-breaking heights. What is being proved is the efficiency of American managers, engineers, and workmen. But it is almost certainly true, as many American business leaders believe, that a bang-up job of war production is the best insurance they can take out against revolutionary changes in the American economic system.

What cost American business leaders their prestige was not of course their incapacity as producers. It was the depression of the early thirties, and their inability to find a way out of it. On top of that came, the intransigeant opposition to moderate economic and social changes on the part of so many business men. Their economic illiteracy and lack of social vision were in striking contrast to their ingenuity and efficiency as organizers and managers.

SOME BUSINESSMEN came out of the depression and their struggle against the New Deal in a collective mental state bearing many symptoms of paranoia. Some have been lost beyond redemption. But regular work and a sense of achievement appear to be having generally a curative effect. This improvement would have been more apparent earlier if the business representation in the defense production program in Washington had been more foresighted. The men with a grasp of the war production program nave come to the front and taken charge, but not until the business community as a whole had suffered because of those who underestimated the magnitude of the job or, consciously or unconsciously, put the protection of individual enterprises ahead of the national need.

But that is past history. And American business, riding the swell of war production, has another chance to prove capacity for leadership. But prodigious production alone will not establish this capacity. It can be shown only by a change in attitude toward a whole range of economic and social questions.

THERE ARE a number of hopeful signs, not only in individual cases, but in the general attitude of some of the spokesmen for organized business. William P. Witherow, president of the National Association of Manufacturers, has taken a moderately progressive line on many questions—one far removed from the NAM line of not so many years ago. Eric A. Johnston, new president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, has been talking with a number of Government officials, including the President. He is also making contacts with leaders of organized labor. Young and personally attractive, Johnston recognizes that business can never recover prestige and political power until it is identified with a more enlightened attitude toward social and economic problems. It has been a good many years since the United States Chamber of Commerce swung any weight around Washington. It is too early to say to what Johnston's fresh approach will lead—to see what his generalities will boil down to, and whether, if he is as broad-minded as he talks, he will be able to carry his organization with him.

Johnston is convinced that labor unions and collective bargaining are here to stay. He believes that labor has an equal interest with business in preservation of what he calls the "free individual" system.

Actually, there are few issues today which divide business leaders from other groups. There are tax questions, of course—but war taxes are going to sock everyone and, on the whole, business is accepting the unavoidable with good grace. There is no important regulatory legislation under debate. As temporary war measures, businessmen as a whole are taking whatever the Government decides is necessary.

The main controversies center around labor unions, and the sharpest is over the closed shop and milder provisions for union security. For all practical purposes, this controversy has been settled by recent War Labor Board decisions, and the sooner it is dropped by industrial management the better for all concerned. The way will then be clearer for them, with the general public and the rank and file of union workers, to insist on responsible union leadership and the cleaning out of abuses in the labor movement.

The Old Guard dies slowly, but it is dwindling; and the war offers the more flexible and farseeing business leaders the chance to shove it out of the way and so to capitalize on their record of war production.

Congress Loses Face

SOME GOOD surely must come of the recent outburst in Congress against criticism in the press which some members of both houses denounced as the operation of a design to undermine public faith in the national legislature. The outcry showed that Cogress at least has become aware that it has lost to some extent the confidence which it should have been diligent to deserve, and I think we may expect a revival of this body's sense of public duty.

But while the subject is still warm, direct attention should be paid to two decisions of the Supreme Court which are more insulting to Congress and more harmful to its prestige than all the criticism that has been expressed by all the opinionarians of journalism.

These were the decisions in the carpenters' case and the teamsters' case, accompanied by opinions written by Justices Frankfurter and Byrnes, respectively. The opinions together imputed to Congress an intention to parcel out to certain private organizations a special right to act in bad faith, to commit crimes and to publish slanderous falsehoods harmful to innocent victims.

I DO NOT believe any United States Congress ever had any such perfidious intention and yet Congress has taken these degrading decisions lying down and they have become the law of the land by decision of the Supreme Court.

To be sure, court decisions are dull reading and the people generally may not understand the evil intent which these two opinions have attributed to Congress. But Congress knows what they meant and Congress has permitted these immoral dicta to go unchallenged. I should say, however, that the House of Representatives has been more alert and sensitive than the Senate and has twice tried to remove this stigma but has been blocked by the Senate. Again, a few days ago, in the House, a subcommittee of the Judiciary Committee recommended another legislative proposal which would have disavowed this Congressional connivance at crimes committed by privileged groups but precedent indicates that if this one should pass the House it, too, will be blocked in the Senate. The Senate then, in this most grievous instance, must be blamed for a loss of public confidence which some members have attributed to disrespectful comment by the press.

For surely Congress cannot expect to retain the respect of the people when, by the negative process of smothering repudiative measures, it permits the charge to stand that the law-making body of the Nation intended to confer crime rights on any group.

Does it occur to you that I might be exaggerating or distorting the meaning of these opinions? I wish that were so, because a personal error, however humiliating, would be trivial by comparison with the indisputable meaning of these opinions.

JUSTICE FRANKFURTER admittted that the carpenters had violated their agreement; that the employer, the Anheuser-Busch Co. was blameless and helpless in a fight between the carpenters and another union and that the company was not guilty of unfairness. Yet he delivered the shocking dictum that the picketing of the company with false statements and the creation of a national boycott of its products was "a familiar practice in these situations and said that Congress, in the Clayton Act, intended to legalize such plainly dishonest harmful conduct.

In the other case, where it had been shown that the teamsters had practiced brigandage and extortion on the highways, Justice Byrnes held that for a truck owner to reject an offer of service by a union racketeer whose services he does not need amounts to an overt act on his part even though "in several cases the jury could have found that the defendants refused to work for the money when asked to do so." He thus inferred that Congress intended to legalize the extortion of money from employers hauling food from country to city as the price of immunity from harm even though the employer refuses to accept an extra, and unnecessary guest driver and no service is performed for the money.

Did any Congress ever sink so low as to entertain any such vicious intent?

That is for Congress to say and thus far the Senate, by its frustration of acts passed by the House, to repudiate such intention, has accepted the accusation.

Plea for Dental Tools

Siskiyou, Calif. (U.P.)—Dr. Stanley McNulty, dentist of Yreka, Calif., who is a prisoner in Japan, appealed to the Red Cross to secure dental instruments needed in the prison camp. He reports there are 336 Americans in the camp, many of whom need dental attention.

Gas, Rubber, Ships

By Mark Sullivan

Public Needs An Explanation

SENATOR LEE of Oklahoma telegraphed a request to President Roosevelt. It was about rationing of gas in his and other States where gas and oil come out of the ground—hence involve little or no transportation. Senator Lee asked that, if there is to be rationing in oil-producing communities, the necessity of it be explained to the public.

SULLIVAN

The spirit of this request is shared by other Senators and Representatives from oil-producing States. It is shared by the people generally, in those and nearby States. In all that part of the country where oil is produced, or to which it can be carried without water transportation, there is protest. There is some protest even in Eastern seaboard States. Even though these understand that they get their gas and oil largely by water, and that water transportation is restricted by submarines, nevertheless there is some protest. The public, in all the States, needs the explanation Senator Lee asks for. But gas cannot be explained without explaining some othert things.

There are three things, related. They are: Gas, rubber and ships. Begin with rubber. (I speak here of new rubber only, without reference to reclaimed rubber.)

IN NEW RUBBER, the shortage is absolute, and desperately serious. One fact is sufficient. Of all our normal supply, some 95 per cent came from the Far East. This is now cut off, all of it. The quantity on hand in America when the stoppage occurred, through Japan's victories, was about one year's supply for normal civilian use. But now, this is needed for military use, immediately or in the near future. If we were willing to be ruthless in self-sacrifice, and if it were practicable, every pound of new rubber now in the United States would be withdrawn for our armed forces and those of our Allies.

How soon, and from where, can we get more new rubber? There is talk of planting in this country, a kind of rubber plant called guayuale. As to this, informed persons are skeptical, about quantity possible to produce, and time needed to produce it. There is talk of rubber from South America. But the quantity is small, the quality inferior—and it would take ships to get it here. Rubber from South America runs up against one of our other great shortages, the shortage of ships.

THERE IS synthetic rubber. This we will produce, factories are setting about it. Synthetic rubber, when we get to producing it in quantity, will be—so this writer is assured by one who knows the subject—better and less expensive than natural rubber. But how soon can we produce synthetic rubber in material quantity? There are varying estimates—none less than a year. In any estimate—about producing something wholly new, for which we have no experience, and under wartime conditions of scarce labor and scarce raw materials and some inevitable confusion—in any estimate, it will be prudent to add an extra year or so as a margin for error or safety. Synthetic rubber is a matter of mass production, and about mass production there seem to be two contrary rules. One is, the quantity produced, after factories get fully under way, is greater than we expected. But the other rule is, it takes longer to get under way than is commonly expected. And even after we get mass production of synthetic rubber, the output for the first year or so may be needed for war. Any citizen, making an estimate for himself, will be prudent to assume it may be two years before he is able to get synthetic rubber tires freely.

If we can't get rubber tires, why complain about not getting gas? This applies to the whole of the country. Use of an automobile wears out rubber as fast in Oklahoma as in New York.

True, there are uses of gas and oil which do not entail use of rubber—gas for industrial purposes, oil for heating, and as fuel in factories. As respects these uses, there is justification for the attitude of oil producing communities. There is no ground for rationing oil or gas, when used for purposes other than automobiles, in sections where oil is produced. But in the Eastern states, oil and gas for any purpose are to some extent a charge upon water transportation, upon ships. And ships are as serious a shortage as rubber.

Beneath all this are some grim facts, which America must look in the face, and the sooner the better. We are under stark necessity for a national exertion, of materials and man power, so prodigious that few realize it. There are few short cuts that are practicable. There will be short cuts for effectiveness in war, and it is the nature of American genius to find them. But there can be no short cuts for the benefit of civilian convenience and comfort, at the expense of war. If we propose new pipelines to carry oil and gas for civilian use, the raw material for those pipelines is the same raw material we need desperately for ships. When we set about producing synthetic rubber in quantity, we make a draft on the same man power that we need for ships.

Beneath everything are two conditions. One is the magnitude of the war—by any tenable view, we will need every possible exertion of man power and resources. The other is the duration of war—there is not now in sight any evidence from which we can assume other than a prolonged war. If we saw our condition clearly, we would realize we are in the position in which, in the gambling phrase, the only way is to "throw everything on the red."

Australia's Vast Acreage Can Keep A.E.F. Larder Full

Australia as a base for offensive war against Japanese invaders to the north is one to which shipments of most United States food supplies are unnecessary. Pacific ships can thus carry more tanks, planes, and ammunition.

The magnitude of supplies available for United States forces in Australia is indicated by the surpluses normally exported, the National Geographic Society points out. More than a third of the foodstuff produced in the continent has been finding its way in recent years to foreign markets.

One shortage, which the United States may have to make up, is in tobacco. Australia's homegrown output is not enough for its needs. Before the war, the United States supplied most Australian smokers, shipping some 20 million pounds a year, in addition to more than 20 million cigarettes.

The principal reason for Australia's exportable food surplus is that the area is vast, yet the country has relatively few mouths of its own to feed. With an area almost equal to that of the United States, the population is not much over 5 per cent of the United States figure.

Large regions of the continent are covered by desert and much of the remainder is poor land, unsuited to agriculture. But this latter land supports great herds of cattle and sheep—13 million cattle, 115 million sheep. The result has been a large foreign trade in meat, hides and wool.

The farm land is mostly in wheat, with fields of vast acreage where machinery can be employed economically. From the wheat not exported Australian mills annually ground over a million and a quarter tons of flour, half of it flowing into foreign trade.

Since Australia is in the Southern Hemisphere, its climate is cool to the south, warm to the north. In position, its northernmost reaches are to be compared to the north coast of South America, while its southern regions are like those around Washington and mid-California. The country, reaching into the tropics is able to produce much that the United States has to import.

There is no shortage of sugar. Australia grows its own cane on an eastern coastal strip of 20,000 square miles. More than half the sugar produced, or nearly a half million tons, was formerly exported.

The continent produced a 40 million dollar fruit crop, including, in addition to apples, pears and peaches, such fruits as oranges, lemons, grapefruit, pineapples, olives, figs and bananas. More than half of its 72 million cans of fruit were exported each year.

Australia's wool clip is about a billion pounds a year. Great Britain was the largest wool buyer, with Belgium and France in recent years replacing Japan in second place. United States purchases have varied from 300,000 to nearly a hundred million pounds.

Accordingly, the problem of uniforms for the A. E. F. can also be solved in Australia, where the mills produce over 30 million yards of cloth and 18 million pairs of socks a year.

As for footwear, the great herds of cattle assure an abundance of raw material for Australia's more than 200 shoe factories, geared to produce about 20 million pairs a year.

The exportable surplus in the past, upon which Uncle Sam could presumably draw as needed, included 50 million dollars worth of meat a year, with flour and wheat worth close to 70 million dollars. Dairy products exceeded in value 75 million dollars; fruits and vegetables, 30 million dollars; sugar, 20 million dollars. Wool totaled over 200 million dollars a year, with hides and skins amounting to some 30 million dollars.

Any United States Cavalry could also be provided for from Australia's 1,750,000 horses. Their suitability for cavalry purposes is apparent from the fact that India took a large part of the 4000 annual export for remount purposes.

In Love And War

Dear Oscar—If this ever reaches you it is just to let you know my three last letters have been returned as misdirected. Where are you, anyway? All my love,

HARRIET.

Dear Harriet—You've got me there, darling. Where am I? What a question that is to ask me? I have got switched around so much that I lost my bearings long ago. Sergeant Mooney says he knows where we are, but I think he is just boasting. I think I am still in the United States on account of the languages and dialects I hear is about the same as ever. Also the animal witch I seen on guard duty the other night and witch I serposed might be a kangaroo was a dog.

* * * *

Also I have not seen no jaunting cars or shillaylees around nowhefes and the stuff I been hiking through has not been shamrocks. There was a rumor I was in Bermuda, but I still think I wood recognize Bermuda by the bicycles and hacks, although them things is getting pretty thick in America also lately. Eddie Bunce says he thinks we are in Madagascar. He says he got it straight from a fortune teller.

* * * *

Corporal O'Malley says he thinks we are in Shangri-La. This in the place President Roosevelt has been mentioning, but I never heard of it except in connection with some picture in witch Marlene Dietrich was to act. If I hear anything definite about where I am I will let you know, and it will be a great favor if you will do the same for me.

I seen a March of Time picture and in a group of jeeps landing somewhere in Australia I thought I saw my face, but I gess it was just somebody who looked like me, witch Sergeant Mooney says is impossible.

* * * *

I sure wish I know I was near the front, as I am anxious to take a slap at them Japs and Heinies. It don't seem fair that Tim Oshenko should be doing so much and me so little. From the Russian news it looks like Hitler is going to lose a lot of generals on account of nervus breakdowns. I hear Hitler just had another meeting with Mussolini and Mussolini offered to sign over his part in the war to Hitler for 2 per cent on the dollar and a letter from Hitler saying he didn't know what he was doing.

* * * *

I suppose you've been reading about them heroes like Jimmy Doolittle and all the others, but do not worry, as I will have plenty of medals also if they ever stop drilling me and let me take a punch at the enemy. Nothing is keeping up my morale like knowing that the gas shortage is so bad you can't go no place nights to speak of, and I love you more every day.

* * * *

I hear New York is dimmed out so much you can't see a Hawaiian pineapple juice stand a mile away. Do not go out in it at all, as I do not want you to get hurt or lost, as I got enough to worry about without both of us being lost. Just write me 8 or 10 copies of each letter from now on and address 'em to different camps. Maybe one will find me. Love and kisses.

OSCAR.

P. S.—Send me a map, please. The one I got is almost 10 days old and no good no more.

Ickes Sees No Relaxing of East's Gas Rationing

Boston, May 26 (AP).—Secretary of Interior Ickes advised New England oil dealers tonight that "rather severe" rationing of all petroleum products "is likely to be necessary throughout the East for an indefinite period."

He said that every effort was being made to give New England as much petroleum as possible because of the important war industries and the recreation business in the area and in view of the long and rigorous winters.

He told the Independent Oil Men's Association of New England, however:

"The plain and ugly truth, gentlemen, is simply this: There is no valid basis, as of tonight, for telling you that the petroleum supply situation on the East Coast is going to improve substantially in the immediate future."

Lessons From Burma

By Barnet Nover

General Stilwell's Revelations

AT NEW DELHI where he arrived this week after an epic march of 140 miles through wild Burmese jungles, Lieut. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell blurted out the plain, unvarnished truth as to just what happened in the Burma campaign.

NOVER

"I claim we got a hell of a beating," he said. "We got run out of Burma and it is humiliating as hell. I think we ought to find out what caused it, go back and retake it."

It was characteristic of this tough old warrior that he indulged in no heroics, made no apologies nor sought in any way to gloss over the dismal realities of the Allied defeat in Burma. It is equally characteristic of him that General Stilwell refused to write off Burma as a final loss. "If we go back properly proportioned and equipped," he said, "we can throw them out."

IN BURMA the United Nations suffered a disaster of major magnitude. The grim consequences are already being felt.

India is in danger and to defend India we shall have to divert men and materiel needed elsewhere and in numbers and volume which, had they been available for the defense of Burma would have prevented that country from falling into Japanese hands.

Because of the fall of Burma, China's plight has very considerably been worsened. Except by air and except for the long, roundabout and impracticable land route via Russia, China is now completely cut off from her Allies.

The Burma Road all the way from Lashio to a point well within the Yunnan border is in enemy control. Kunming and even Chunking are imperilled. In the meantime the Japanese, taking advantage of the successful conclusion of the Burma campaign, have undertaken a large-scale offensive in Chekiang Province as well. The intent is obviously to eliminate China from the war.

THIS IS NO time for recrimination. The United Nations' forces put up a great fight in Burma. They were not lacking in courage or daring. The exploits of the American Volunteer Group under General Chennault, for instance, will go down as an epic of achievement in the face of fantastic odds.

Undoubtedly mistakes were made, grievous mistakes. But when the situation is boiled down to its fundamentals the reason for the Allied defeat was that our side was hopelessly outnumbered.

We were outnumbered on the ground and in the air. Yet Gen. Stilwell estimates that at no time did the Japanese employ in Burma a force of more than 50,000 men. But these 50,000 men were well equipped and the United Nations forces were not. The Japanese had air power. We did not. "We didn't even have an antiaircraft gun," says Gen. Stilwell of the forces under his immediate command.

ONCE AGAIN, apparently, the Japanese won a bonanza on a shoestring. And Burma was only a repetition of what had happened elsewhere—at Hongkong and Malaya, at Singapore and Java and in the Philippines.

It is doubtful if, altogether, the Japanese have employed more than half a million troops in all the campaigns they have waged in the southwestern Pacific and Burma since Pearl Harbor. It is doubtful whether, altogether, the total number of planes which the Japanese threw into the fighting on the various fronts and which, from the Philippines to Java and Burma enabled them to secure complete mastery of the air, add up to as many as are now being turned out by American factories in only one month.

This production will, no doubt, ultimately help us right the balance. But it certainly did not make possible Allied air superiority in the Pacific and Burma. There our air power has been pitifully meager.

THE REASON behind this tragic circumstance is that we lacked shipping—and time. Even had we employed all the shipping we could requisition, cutting our imports for civilian consumption to the bone or eliminating them altogether, the earlier losses we suffered in the Pacific war might have proved unavoidable.

The question arises whether the contemplation of our mounting production of planes and tanks and guns—and ships—did not tend to inhibit the application of emergency measures that might have spared us the later losses.

This question no layman, lacking all the facts, can adequately answer. General Stillwell's testimony as to what happened in Burma does not sugest that we did all we possibly could to have averted that tragic disaster.

Leslie McNemar Cited for Heroism Against Sharks

Pvt. Leslie E. McNemar of 3161 Twentieth Street, Arlington, Va., has been cited for the Soldier's Medal for heroism during the Puerto Rican Department maneuvers in San Juan Harbor, October 5, 1941, the War Department announced yesterday.

McNEMAR

A Washington and Lee High School graduate, McNemar had risked his life in shark-infested waters diving for two hours for the bodies of pilots of a plane that had crashed during maneuvers.

McNemar enlisted in the Army in 1940, not long after being graduated from high school with the rank of major in the cadet corps. His father, L. S. McNemar, is an attorney in the office of the Judge Advocate in London. He has a brother, Warren, in the Marine Corps stationed at Portsmouth, N. H.

Grand Chapter Gives Pageant

An historical pageant commemorating the 50th anniversary of the Washington Grand Chapter of the Order of the Eastern Star was witnessed last night by an audience of more than 1000 in the Metropolitan A. M. E. Church, 1518 M Street Northwest.

Entitled "Shabang," the Greek word for "fulfillment," the elaborate show depicted the development of Masonry from the Creation to the formation of the Order of the Eastern Star. More than 300 members participated in the show.

The Gallup Poll

By George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., May 26.—Should the President appoint a unified command over both the Army and the Navy?

That question has become not only one of the most widely discussed proposals of the war but one of the most controversial, with experts split in their opinion over its merits. Some are inclined to blame the tragedy of Pearl Harbor on inadequate coordination between land, sea and air forces, and to argue that if one man were appointed to direct all three, such disasters might be prevented in the future.

While the issue is one for military leaders to decide, a survey of the views of civilian community leaders with opinions on the question finds sentiment predominately in favor of a unified command.

Civic Leaders Polled

These leaders constitute a representative cross-section of persons prominent in civic life in 239 communities across the country—heads of local service and community clubs, boards of education, religious councils, county political chairmen, heads of labor councils and others in positions of influence. They were personally interviewed by a staff of field reporters on behalf of the Institute, and their views sought on this question:

"Should the President, as commander-in-chief of the armed forces of the country, name a military leader to direct both the Army and the Navy?"

Community Leaders

Favor Unified Command	49%
Opposed	40
Undecided	11

If the tabulation is confined to those who expressed an opinion, the vote is 55 per cent in favor, 45 per cent opposed.

A recent Institute poll of the general public on the same issue finds that the country at large is evenly divided in its sentiment, as follows:

Favor Unified Command	41%
Opposed	41
Undecided	18

Attitudes toward this question will, in the future, depend largely on the course of military events. In the past, agitation for a unified command has generally increased after a military setback for one of the United Nations, and decreased when things were going well.

The Times of London has been one of the outstanding advocates of a unified command for the British forces, urging the creation of a body that would hold single command over the army, navy and air force. The Nazi military system places the German army, navy and air force under the single direction of a High Command.

The London Times remarks that the combined general staff plan has been tried on a small scale in recent British commando raids, and contends that what is good "for these little wars" might also be desirable for war on a large scale.

mechanized reconnaisance battalion, with scout cars, half tracks, jeeps and tanks, is it sscree:::; when it fights it will dismount and fight as infantry until the foot soldiers come up and take over. Then it will be sent on for more reconnaisance, or swung over to a flank for security or held in reserve until it is needed for reconnaisance, for backing up a heavily assailed point in the line or for violent counterattack.

Thus cavalry, in spite of the speed and magnitude of modern war, retains its flexibility, the thing that makes it cavalry. The Russians have amply demonstrated its value when properly used. To command new troops and new squadrons the Cavalry is building for the new Army, and to care for their animals and vehicles another part of Fort Riley is turning out officers and noncommissioned officers in wholesale lots. Noncommissioned officers and selected officers are given a course at the motor school, where they learn to maintain the cavalry vehicles. Others are trained in the swift communications necessary in fast-moving bodies of troops like cavalry. Men are taught horseshoeing and simple blacksmithing.

The Officer Candidate School, with chosen enlisted men now enrolled, turns out Cavalry second lieutenants every three weeks, with a loss during the course of only about 5 per cent. Within a few weeks the school will be increased.

There is a most serious effort made here, from the time a young soldier arrives until he earns his bars, to impress upon him the responsibility he assumes with his commission. He is told, frankly and without embellishment and in a hudred different ways, that being an officer is not just wearing a pretty uniform and taking salutes and being a member of the Officers' Club.

Reminded He Must Lead

He is reminded constantly that he is training to elad men in battle, men whose lives may some day depend upon his judgment, on a decision that he must make in a split second. He is taught that from the day he accepts his rank this responsibility is his; that the men under him will be trained and disciplined to obey him in the stress of danger, that it is his duty to do and act so the life of not one of them will be needlessly laid down.

It sobers them and fills them with uncommon gravity and makes officers of them by understanding, and not simply by act of Congress.

In the Officers' School the same idea is everlastingly pounded into them. They are never allowed to forget that they are training for bloody and dangerous work, that 32 of the officers graduated from the Cavalry School last year are now either dead or prisoners of a barbarous enemy.

They want to make training as realistic as possible here, to leave nothing undone which will impress on recruit, officer candidate or officer the seriousness of the task he has undertaken. In the Second Cavalry Division training already has been carried out with artillery firing live ammunition over the troops. They would like to extend that sort of training until every officer and man knows the sound and the feel of steel in the air and knows he can take it.

LORD AND LADY HALIFAX STAND CLOSE TO CAGE FOR A LOOK AT GARGANTUA

Protocol Is Smashed as Gargy Sits and Stares

An Ambassador met a gorilla yesterday and protocal was smashed to smithereens.

While His Brittanic Majesty's envoy and Lady Halifax stood up, Gargantua brazenly kept his seat and returned stare for stare. He was even guilty of so great a breach as to take a cooling drink in their presenee without offering to pass the bottle.

The audience took place at the circus. Anxious particularly to see Gargy and his bride, M'Toto, the British Ambassador and Lady Halifax led a party of nine out to the grounds.

As technical adviers, Henry Field (of the famous Field Museum in Chicago), and Harold J. Coolidge, animal expert, were along to explain why a gorilla has a sort of musty odor, wherefore his crest, what he eats, etc.

"Hm-m-m, sharp teeth," Lord Halifax observed, as a small glass door was swung open to give him a better view of the beast.

"Quite," agreed Mr. Coolidge.

Where Gargantua was rather sand-offish—as far as he's concerned an Ambassador is just another gawker—his mate, M'Toto, was unusually sociable. Lord Halifax didn't shake hands with her or anything like that but she did put on a little performance, swinging coyly and turning a somersault.

When gorilla inspection was over, the Ambassador fed a popcorn crisp to Babe, the elephant, and then took his party into the circus cook tent for lunch. Thence to the matinee performance on the 50-yard line.

Lord Halifax is only one of the many dignitaries who, some sheepishly and others quite openly, are giving official duties the go-by for a few hours this week to take in the big show.

Many grandmothers' funerals are going to pop up between now and Saturday night, when the circus pulls up stakes.

Vacationing at Home?

Capital Provides Sports Facilities

(Because of wartime restrictions on gasoline, annual leave and—just around the corner—train and bus travel, stay-at-home vacations may be the rule here this summer. This is the fourth in a series by Mr. Kelly describing recreational opportunities in the Capital's own back yard.)

By Edward J. Kelly
Administrative Officer, National Capital Parks.

Washington's conversion to a wartime footing has necessitated the drafting of certain ball diamonds, tennis courts and other facilities for military uses, true. But plenty still remain.

A sample vacation day on a modest budget, for instance, might include a morning round of golf at the East Potomac, Anacostia or Rock Creek courses, horseback riding along park bridle paths in the afternoon and canoeing by moonlight on the Potomac or C. & O. Canal.

The D. C. Recreation Department, the National Capital Parks system and numerous semiprivate clubs and institutions devoted to recreation provide top-notch facilities for more than 30 major sports.

There are more than 100 first-class tennis courts located in the downtown and residential areas. You probably will find a battery of good courts within easy walking distance of your home. The best clay courts are in East Potomac Park, Rock Creek Park at Sixteenth and Kennedy Streets Northwest and in the Mall at Third Street.

Swimming? Operated the year around are the pools at the Shoreham, Wardman Park and Ambassador hotels. Glen Echo Park opened its pool for the summer last Saturday. In a few weeks the swim season will be opened at Takoma and Banneker Recreation Centers, Anacostia and East Potomac Parks and McKinley High and Francis Junior High Schools. The Central High School indoor pool also will be opened next month, as will the children's pools at Georgetown and Rosedale playgrounds.

A canoe can be rented at one of several boathouses along the Potomac River and C. & O. Canal, between Georgetown and Chain Bridge. The canal, always placid, offers a greater margin of saftey but the experienced canoeist can navigate the river between Hains Point and Chain Bridge under favorable weather conditions without too great risk.

The Tidal Basin offers "pedal" boats and a motor-propelled swan boat at moderate fees. Rowboats are obtainable at many locations along the Potomac and Anacostia.

Bicycling was restored to popularity in Washington when a rental concession was opened in Potomac Park several years ago. Today it is one of the most popular and colorful of all outdoor activities in the park system.

Horseback riding has a legion of devotees. Saddle trails of Rock Creek Park are especially popular at this time of year.

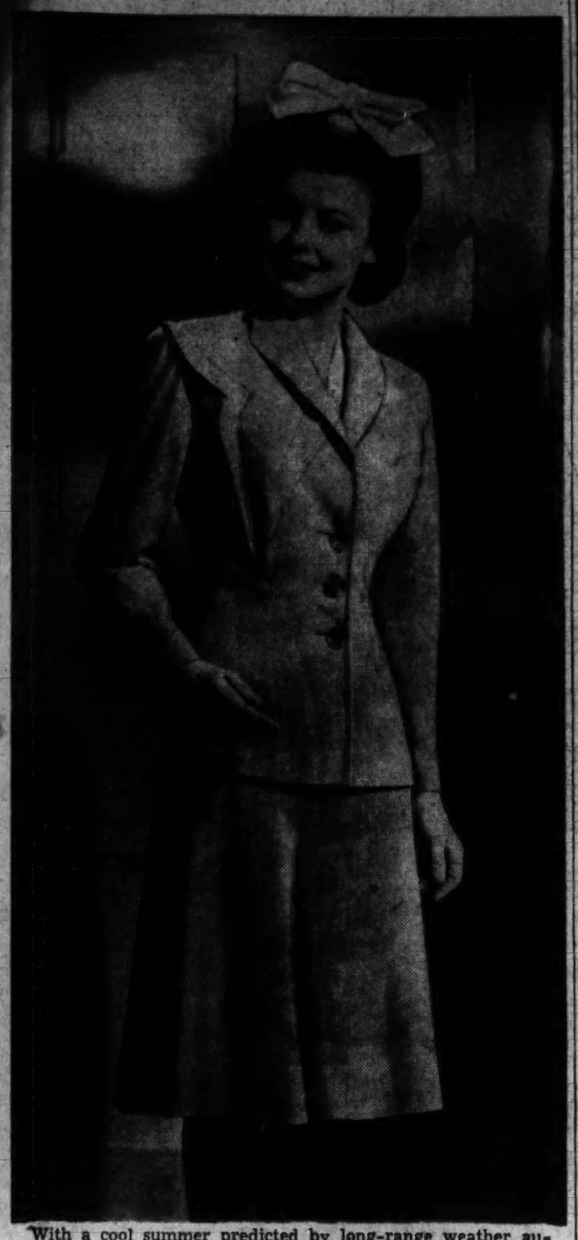
Suited for Home or Travel



With a cool summer predicted by long-range weather authorities, the summer suit is meeting a great demand from forehanded shoppers. Made of silk and Eastman rayon, it is practical for cool summer days and warm enough for travel jaunts. Hand tailoring, with deftly manipulated tucks, marks the lined jacket. A white sharkskin scarf sets off the fine detail. Practicality and chic are combined in this day-out costume for town and country. The colors are dusty rose, beige and blue in junior sizes.

Aids for Straw-Like Hair

Don't get yourself in a stew if your hair hasn't come through your latest permanent in a soft, glossy and proper manner. It it is harsh and strawy, don't annoy your family and friends by asking, "Did you ever see my hair look worse?"

Rather the thing to do is to go to a reliable beauty salon and have your crispy hair examined. Perhaps it has been subjected to too much heat, perhaps the hair has been stretched too tightly when wounds but that doesn't mean that it can't be restored to soft waves and lovely curls.

Usually one treatment of cream emulsion massaged into the hair, with special heat pad applied, so that the hair will absorb the emulsion and give it "new life," is all that is necessary. If the "hay-like" quality doesn't disappear after one treatment, two usually do the work.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Facing Graduation Fully Outfitted as Officer, And Having No Need of Superfluous Articles, Midshipman Asks How to Prevent Flow of Gifts

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Undoubtedly you receive many letters from the Naval Academy, many of them posing problems that could hardly be considered authentic. However, the question I am presenting is sufficiently different, I hope, from the general run of midshipmen's queries, to convince you that your advice is sincerely desired in this instance.

As you know, another class is just about to graduate here. As part of the tradition surrounding graduation exercises, classmen are expected to send announcements of the event to friends and relatives. Courtesy demands that each graduate send out at least a few such cards. However, as I understand the custom, receipt of this announcement obligates the recipient to give a graduation gift to the sender. Hence the problem.

Officers' equipment is prescribed by regulation and every graduate of the Naval Academy always procures his full outfit beforehand—so that most certainly no gifts of a supposedly useful variety are required. And any other gift would naturally constitute nonusable material. Therefore, I would like to know how I can let my friends and relatives know that, in sending them announcement cards, I am not putting myself in line for a gift? The thought that I might be obligating people to send me gifts that I really don't need bothers me.

Would it be correct to write, "No present expected"—or something like that—on each announcement? Or is there any better way of handling the situation, so that they will understand that no gift-giving obligation exists? This is a question that is puzzling a great many members of my class, and any suggestions you can give us for settling the problem will be much appreciated. Sincerely, FIRST CLASSMAN.

Boy's Good Sense Suggests the Answer

DEAR F. C.: Your own good sense has already propounded the correct answer to the question of how to forestall an avalanche of congratulatory but superfluous graduation gifts. Since you and many of your classmates considerately wish to restrain relatives and friends from making nonessential expenditures in your honor, the best way of getting the idea across is to write, neatly, in pen and ink, on the lower left corner of each announcement card, the candid directive: "No present, please."

The finically polite person may disapproved of that solution—arguing that it were inexcusably bad manners thus to anticipate the possibility that a gift would be forthcoming, unless declined in advance. And it is true, in theory, that the receipt of this type of announcement does not automatically impose obligation to dispatch a gift in acknowledgment. Yet the fact is, the normally sentimental recipient of such a card is warmed by mingled feelings of pride and appreciation at being thus remembered; and genuinely wants to give concrete expression to his cordially grateful reaction. It is a spontaneous impulse to show in some more convincing way than words how he feels in the matter, that prompts the average recipient to send the graduate a gift. And since the sentiment and its enactment generally prevail, it would seem nonsensically coy of you to affect ignorance of the trend—when, for good reason, you want no presents.

So, in case any hair-splitting students of etiquette think fit to dispute the propriety of writing "No present, please," on your announcement cards, my advice is to pay no attention to them. As a matter of fact, various engaged couples of impeccable social background have long since broken trail in this regard, by inscribing similar instructions on their wedding invitations—when already superabundantly stocked with this world's goods. M. H.

Women Are Attracted By One Subject: Man!

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Permit me to inject my comment into the controversy on the subject of woman's mental capacity and intellectual curiosity (or lack of same) which has lately occupied your thought-provoking column. There is, I believe, some justification for the pessimistic deductions of some of your contributors. However, it would be unscientific and therefore untenable to attribute intellectual lethargy on the part of women to psychogenic traits. I may definitely say that psychologists have been unable to establish evidence of organic inferiority in the female mind.

When we ta'k of inferiority and superiority, we must ask ourselves: Inferior, or superior, to what? What sort of criteria do we employ as a measuring stick? The best answer we can make to such questions is: In a world that has been traditionally dominated by masculine standards, feminine ideas and patterns of thought have been adjudged "inferior." But who can say that the induction is valid?

Nevertheless, I venture to think there is a certain amount of truth in the theory. Women as a rule are subjective about problems and issues, personal or social. In many instances they are not interested in serious discussion of any kind unless it affects them personally. They do not take the cosmic view of things. Many of them simply do not have the cultural background which stimulates intellectual growth; and others don't care to develop the cultural advantages they have. They seem to hope to find escape from thought in marriage.

For years I have been (theoretically) a teacher of girls—in girls' colleges, in private schools and in two universities. And while I realize the vulnerability of broad generalizations, my observation of young women leads me to think the majority are not interested in forming considered opinions on any subject—except, possibly, the subject of men. Young men, on the other hand, do show some stirrings of intellectual life; and evidence a capacity to view facts, events and ideas with a lesser degree of emotion.

Some may say that more emotion and less objectivity would be all to the good. Perhaps so. For, after all, emotion has produced much of our art and science; and the sorry mess in which the world finds itself today came to pass with the more logical male in the saddle. But be that as it may, the female's bland refusal to be impersonal, to judge ideas on intrinsic merit, to read a good book once in a while, or to juxtapose all sides in a discussion, leaves her open to the charge of mental incapacity and unfitness for intellectual companionship.

One more word, Miss Haworth, before I take to my heels. There are, thank God, some women who are intellectually alive and companionable. But it is difficult for men of similar mind to find them. With a few unfortunate exceptions, any man can establish acquaintanceship with women, and vice versa. But the problem is to find the congenial companion. With all our vaunted "social intelligence," we have not devised any better social "system" than the present haphazard, hit-and-miss technique, whereby men and women meet by chance, accident or blind date—and drag themselves from place to place in pursuit of further acquaintances, in the hope that some day they may find their mate. Surely there must be some more effective method of promoting the immemethod of promoting the immemorial quest. Sincerely,

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Here Are Some Ways to Start On Slimming

By Ida Jean Kain

WITH all that tightening up of fashion lines, you haven't much choice except to go short on bulges. There is nothing for fashion but a good figure. No doubt your waist and hips will be the two measurements that strain at the seams.

Slim and Flatten

To slim your waist and flatten your stomach, do this exercise: Lie on your back on the floor with arms straight up on floor overhead and legs straight down. Swing left arm and right leg up simultaneously and touch fingers to toes. Return to position and repeat with the other leg and arm. Keep the knes and elbows straight and swing rhythmically. Continue for 20 counts.

Now do an easy stretcher: Remain in the same starting position with legs straight down and arms straight up on floor. Push the right arm up just a little higher on the floor as you turn your hips to the left and stretch your right leg across to the floor beyond. Hold the stretch for a second, relax and repeat five times. Then stretch on the other side. That one works on the waistline inches.

Hitch-Hikers' Special

Some of the exercises with the least action are the most effective. If you can do this hitch-hikers' special correctly, you will be surprised at the improvement it makes in your hipline. Sit on the floor with your arms straight out at the sides, shoulder level, and your legs straight out in front and together. Pull up and in with the lower abdominal muscles. Now keep your arms out of the movement as you push one hip, then the other, causing you to "walk." Make those big muscles on the back of the hips propel you—don't swing your shoulders or roll from side to side as you move along.

The Gentler Sex — By Malvina Lindsay

The Adapter

As a child she conforms to the family.

("Sh! Be quiet! You'll wake the baby." . . . "Let brother have the wagon; you can play with something else." . . . "Get all of your playthings out of the way before Papa comes." . . . "Keep out of the kitchen, or you'll upset Viola." . . . "Now be a good girl at Grandma's." . . . "Go in and shake hands with Uncle Horace like a little lady.")

A little older she adjusts to the school world.

("But what did you do to make Miss Pointer give you those bad marks?" . . . "Well, if the boys tease you, stay away from them." "But its better to get along wtih Joan than to quarrel with her." "But you'll have to walk with Betty—you can't go alone." "Well, if the others want to play hopscotch you'll have to join them—you can't play by yourself.")

Soon she is adapting to her beaux.

("Oh, wherever you want to go." . . . Yes, I've seen 'Spy in Vienna' twice, but I'd love to see it again." . . . "Oh, tell me all about the track meet." . . . "And then what did you do with the ball?" . . . "She sounds like a very wonderful girl." . . . "And then when you get to the African veldt, where will you go?")

And then at college she is rubbing off more corners.

("Oh, that's all right. I wasn't going to wear it anyway, and it looks darling on you." . . . "Do you mind if I turn on the light just long enough to undress? . . . "No, you keep the big chair. I can work here." . . . "Tom? Yes, he is good looking. Yes, of course I'll introduce you." . . . Say, we'd better all be careful. This is one of Miss Gimlet's bad days.")

Then a job and more bending to the wind.

("Oh, no; turn off the fan if it bothers you . . . "No, that's all right. "I'll just move out of the draft." . . . Well, I suppose if you have to go, I'll wait this time . . . "Yes, I'll watch the telephones." "Yes, Mr. Flint." . . . "No, Mr. Flint." "All right, Mr. Flint." . . . "I'll have the lettter in just a minute, Mr. Flint." . . . "Yes, I had made some plans for tonight, but of course if you need me, I'll stay.")

Next a husband and—well, of course things must go smoothly.

("Do you mind, darling, if I set this ash tray where it won't spill on the rug?" . . . "But I didn't move a thing off the window sill." . . . "Wait, I'll find it." . . . "But I hung it back in your own closet—wait, I'll get it." . . . "Yes, I supposed you'd were eating lunch downtown, but that's perfectly all right. I'll have something ready in a minute." . . . "I just thought the chair would look better over there, but of course if you want it back . . .")

And then children, and more accommodation.

Gay 90's Gadgets

The recent WPB restriction orders directing concern to the household as to refrigerators, sewing machines, toasters, vacuum cleaners, pails, lamps, bulbs and other allied vehicles will unite with other coming restrictions. Already Yankee ingenuity of invention and substitution replacement is bringing back hundreds of articles and devices used in the "gay nineties" and the Victorian ers. From the halcyon days of the gaslight era, when mother made the girl's dresses, sofa cushions and window curtains, many similar articles are in store without the labor of bygone days.

("But mother has to sew now—Oh, well, all right, bring me the book." . . . No, you'd better let the Bratt children come over here to play—and we'll have some nice little cakes." . . . "Are ALL the girls having new dresses? . . . All right, we'll manage somehow." . . . "No, really my old hat's in perfect style this summer." . . . "Yes, you may wear it, but please be careful." "Oh, well, I'll speak to your father about it." . . . "Did you boys eat EVERYTHING in the refrigerator?")

Next middle age, and ground between the milestones of youth and age.

("Please don't talk about such things before your grandmother." . . . "Yes, Mother, I did speak to Sister about getting in so late." "But darling, you have to consider what other people think." . . . "Oh, I dont' think they drink REAL cocktails, Mother." . . . "But Sister, even if the other girls do—" . . . "Well, of course, Mother, times have changed . . .")

And finally, in old age, adjusting to the crowding life about her.

("No, please don't think of staying home with me." . . . "No, I never mind being alone." . . . "Oh, it was just my glasses, but don't bother to look for them. No, I really dont' want to read." . . . "No, let them turn on 'The Lone Ranger'. No, really, I enjoy it." "No, the children don't keep me awake." . . . "No, no, I'm all right." . . . No, I don't need anything." . . . "No, no, don't bother . . .")

And so she reaches the end of her journey—a tree that has grown in a dense forest, crowded at its roots by the reaching tentacles of other trees, forced to hold its branches tightly to its trunk so that the branches of other trees might find room, but—because of this—growing high and tall and straight and reaching perpetually upward.

Capital Whirl

Official and Social Notables Crowd Street Cars and Buses; 'X Cards' Used Sparingly

IF EVERYBODY in Washington is as conscientious as most members of the Supreme Court, the Cabinet and Congress about using (or rather not using) their "X Cards" the hue and cry against "X Card" holders would soon cease to be heard.

Dignified justices and venerable Senators who haven't been inside a street car or bus since goodness knows when are now riding to Capitol Hill regularly on one or the other. Some are hoofing it all over town, and a few are threatening to take to bicycles or buggies any day now.

Representatives—all of whom are up for reelection, unless they've decided to bow out of the picture entirely—are making it quite clear not only to Capital neighbors but to constituents that they are using a minimum amount of gasoline . . . and would actually be relieved if their "X Cards" were taken away. A few courageously turned theirs back. Representative Allen T. Treadway hit the headlines in his home district by announcing that he refused to take an "X Card" and would do his campaigning by bus.

Mrs. Roosevelt mentioned in a press conference recently that a few days before she allowed herself to be driven to a luncheon in one of the White House cars. But it won't happen again, she added, in effect. In other words, she'll drive her own automobile and (use her own gas rationing card) when she goes out to any luncheon "not purely official" from now on.

Private Cars Left at Home

On almost any bus or street car these days, you're likely to see Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, Mrs. Stanley Reed, Mrs. William O. Douglas, or any of the other Supreme Court wives. Mrs. Reed confesses she had to learn the current technique of ringing the streetcar bell when she wanted to get off at the next stop. Mrs. Douglas says she rides the bus regularly from her Silver Spring home. Mrs. Stone walks to a lot of parties these days, and so does the Chief Justice.

At a recent late-afternoon tea to which flocked most of Washington officialdom, the sleek black limousines that used to pull up in state before the door of any home where a party was being given were conspicuously absent. Many top-rung notables arrived in taxicabs. More came on foot. Even diplomats, who shouldn't be too sensitive about using their "X Cards" to the limit, made a point of having left their limousines at home.

In some cases, there's more to this gesture than meets the eye. A good neighbor envoy in good-neighborly mood the other evening expressed a fresh opinion on the matter—after prefacing his remarks, of course, with the usual "Don't-quote-me." Said he, "I'd be good and glad if they took my 'X Card' away at once. It's a lot harder to keep from burning gasoline when you can have an unlimited supply than it is to cut out driving altogether. Besides," he added with a twinkle, "most of my 'A Card' friends expect me to drive them home from parties. It's a chore!"

When Mrs. Henry A. Wallace entertained some of the harder working members of the Senate Ladies Luncheon Club at a picnic at the Swiss Legation on Monday, most of the guests arrived by taxi—the walking distance being a bit too long for most of those invited. When time to go home rolled around, quick and impromptu conferences were held as to directions homeward for all concerned, and not one vehicle—private car or bus—pulled away from the legation without at least four Senate hostesses inside.

Will It Be Roller Skates Next?

Mrs. Lister Hill has been going downtown quite early recent mornings in order to ride that far with her husband and thus save the ration on her own "A Card" for an emergency. She's another who rides the bus regularly too.

Senator Warren Austin and Senator D. Worth Clark are among those in the Capitol Hill contingent that long ago learned to conserve gasoline. Senator Austin put his automobile in storage several months before rationing hit the boards. He habitually walks from the Shoreham Hotel, where he lives, across the bridge to Connecticut Avenue and there boards a street car for Capitol Hill. Senator Clark is an inveterate bus rider.

"If business happens to take you downtown in an official car, you wish you had walked before you get back home," Mrs. Claude Wickard said yesterday. She generally rides a bus or walks to and from her Westchester apartment when there's time; otherwise, she takes a taxi. So far as I've been able to find out, everybody else in the Cabinet group is doing the same thing. First thing we know, Capital officialdom en masse may be following the example of a gray-bearded man who coasted onto Massachusetts Avenue the other day wearing roller skates!

TOWN TOPICS: President Manuel Quezon of the Philippines and Mrs. Quezon will be guests of honor when Mrs. Edward T. Stotesbury entertains at a large reception on Sunday afternoon, June 7 . . . the Governor of New Jersey and Mrs. Charles Edison have returned to their home in West Orange after spending two days here at the Mayflower. "I just trailed along," said Mrs. Edison—"probably because I take advantage of every chance to get back to Washington."

New Book Has Chapter on Society Here

The book to end books on Washington—social and otherwise—is out on the stalls today and local residents are rushing to read it for "the last word" on their doings and sayings.

Written by Willard Kiplinger, who has had a chance to know his Washington well during his many years of observing the Capital scene, the book, published by Harper & Brothers, is entitled "Washington Is Like That."

Kiplinger, who is editor of the Kiplinger Washington Letter, says, "In other cities, society is incidental to the life of good citizens of the upper or middle class. . . . But in Washington, to most people of comparably upper class, society is a main course."

"Some people like it, and some don't," Kiplinger continues, "but still it's a must. Through it they make contacts, and through contacts they climb, even to better jobs with more publicity."

In a "Guide For Social Climbers," Kiplinger offers some practical advice on how to get ahead in Washington society. "Bagging a name is an approved method of starting up the social ladder," he says, "and there are few women in this Capital of democracy who aren't impressed by titles."

"Rich and socially insecure newcomers usually try to storm Washington by one of two methods," Kiplinger reports. "The first method is based more on money than on brains, and entails financial splurging. The second method, employed by the really clever climber, is to concentrate exclusively on the 'right people.'"

As time-honored methods of meeting the "right people," Kiplinger mentions "charitable work," the "Junior League," and the advice of "one of the Capital's well-known social secretaries."

Kiplinger adds, "You can't buy your way into Washington society columns."

Dutch Embassy Is Scene of Petri Concert

A number of dinners were on the calendar last evening before the Egon Petri concert for the benefit of the Queen Wilhelmina Fund at the Dutch Embassy. Following the performance, Mr. Petri was honored at a small reception given by the Netherlands Ambassador and Mme. Loudon in their Wyoming Avenue residence.

Mrs. Carrere Barbour entertained at dinner, as did the Minister of the Dutch Embassy and Baroness van Boetzelaer. Mme. van Kaathoven was also a dinner hostess and Peter Dewey entertained a group of friends in the Capitol Hill home of his parents, Representative and Mrs. Charles Dewey.

Dining with Mrs. Barbour and going on with her to the concert later were Mrs. Randall Hagner, Mrs. Sidney Lee, Mrs. William P. MacCracken, George Abell, Hans Bull, R. L. Vandelinder and Sidney Taliaferro.

The Minister and Baroness van Boetzelaer invited a few friends for an informal buffet supper, among them members of the Netherlands Embassy staff and some of the "younger set" who later ushered at the concert.

The first formal event to be held in the Euclid Street residence since it was raised to embassy status, the concert last evening drew a record group of Capital notables. Guest Artist Egon Petri, who has been a professor of music at Cornell University since he left the continent two years ago, made his debut as a pianist in 1902 under the sponsorship of Ignace Paderewski. With three sons in the United Nations armed forces—one in the Dutch air forces, one in the United States Army and one in the R. A. F.—Mr. Petri is making his own contribution to the war effort through his musical talents. Proceeds of the concert will go to aid the refugees from the Netherlands Indies.

On the concert committee were Mrs. Truxtun Beale, Mrs. Walter Bruce Howe, Mrs. George A. Garrett, Mrs. George Pettengill, Mrs. Stanley Reed, Mme. van Kaathoven, Mme. van Swinderin, Mrs. Edwin Watson, Mrs. Stanley Woodward and Mrs. Nathan Wyeth.

Voteless Women to Continue Fight For Suffrage, Probe Plight of Teachers

GEARED to an active wartime program, the Voteless District of Columbia League of Women Voters went on record yesterday to investigate the rationing program that keeps District teachers on duty 15 hours a day, and to continue its fight for suffrage in the District. All this was decided at the league's annual meeting in Palisades Park.

The league is determined that education in the District not be neglected in wartime. Also, it is resolved that the public health program be as efficient as possible.

In adopting its program for 1942, the local league placed special emphasis on working for the "extension of the popular vote to the disenfranchised District of Columbia." To the Voteless League, the attainment of the right and responsibility of voting is fundamental.

Remembering that suffrage was obtained in World War I, the local league will intensify its efforts to gain local franchise. It will use leaflets and other educational methods to interpret to the public the reasons for District suffrage.

Also, the District League voted to adopt the program of the National League of Women Voters set up for 1942-1944. This two-year program is flexible and elastic enough to embrace any wartime emergencies that might arise.

Feeling that its system of nominating officers was a little undemocratic, the league yesterday called for nominations from the floor—the first time in the league's history. However, no further nominations were made and the slate was elected unanimously. Mrs. Eugene Callaghan, president of the league, holds over for another year through the stagger plan of election. Mrs.

MRS. OSCAR L. CHAPMAN

Oscar L. Chapman, wife of the Assistant Secretary of the Interior, was named first vice president. Mrs. Chapman shared responsibility for the league's tax school last month.

Two members were elected to the board of directors. These are Mrs. Robert F. Leonard, chairman of the policy committee and chairman of the foreign policy school held in April, and Mrs. Charles H. Weston, temporary chairman of the league's suffrage committee. Mrs. Guy S. Cook, a former member of the office staff, was elected recording secretary.

The constitution was amended to abolish the office of corresponding secretary. Also, the league adopted a resolution to revise its constitution.

Mrs. Callaghan presided over both the morning and afternoon sessions of the annual meeting. She reminded the members that the "league had no more important job than to protect those channels through which democracy flows."

Hadassah Elects

MRS. ISADORE BRESLAU was reelected president of Washington Hadassah at the final meeting recently. She will be installed with special ceremonies on June 9.

Four vice presidents were named for the ensuing term. They are Mrs. Aaron Shalowitz, first vice president; Mrs. Joseph Freedman, second vice president; Mrs. David Kushner and Mrs. Morris Stein, third and fourth vice presidents, respectively.

Other officers include Mrs. Charles Pilzer, treasurer; Mrs. Harry Lourie, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Jacob Kammen, assistant corresponding secretary; Mrs. Isadore Rodis, recording secretary; Mrs. Maurice Eanet, financial secretary; Mrs. Nathan Kluft, assistant financial secretary; Mrs. Herbert Levy, administrative secretary; Mrs. Meyer Bernstein, assistant administrative secretary.

Mrs. Paul Pearlman was reelected trustee and Mrs. Julius Wolpe was the new member named.

Additional Job Questionnaires To Go Out Soon

Tabulation of man power for war production which will demand 10,500,000 additional workers by late autumn will be brought nearer completion next month with the mailing of occupational questionnaires to men over military age, Selective Service headquarters announced yesterday.

"It is from the group beyond military age that we will obtain most of the recruits for this work, William E. Leahy, Selective Service director, said. Many deferred for physical defects will contribute largely to the production Army needs by early fall.

Local boards, completing inventories of men registered in the first and second registrations who have not been inducted, already have sent questionnaires to men who signed up in the February groups; and by June men between 45 and 65 who registered April 27, will be sent theirs, it was said.

Registrants from eight local draft boards will receive physical examinations today at Fort Myer, Va., preparatory to being inducted into the Army, Selective Service headquarters announced yesterday.

D. C. Area Pupils to Take Farm Jobs

Washington area high school boys will work on farms in Montgomery County, Md., this summer at 25 cents an hour under a program to help meet the war shortage of farm labor.

Approximately 125 students, under plans of the Silver Spring (Md.) employment office, will be billeted from June 21 until the first week of September in four county schools and taken to individual farms on work days by transportation still to be arranged.

Cots, mattresses and pillows will be installed at Poolesville, Gaithersburg, Damascus and Sandy Spring High Schools.

The boys' wages will be paid by individual farmer employers. They will be given a noonday meal by the farmer, and breakfast and supper will be served in the school cafeterias. The meals will cost approximately $20 a month, it is estimated.

The boys will be under the supervision of county teachers. Girls employed by the National Youth Administration will serve meals in the cafeterias.

O. W. Anderson, Montgomery County agent, has sent out questionnaires to 1050 county farmers asking if they would employ the boys. Mr. Anderson said that he has received 125 replies, most of which are favorable.

At present, arrangements for transportation of the boys from the school to the farms have not been completed. Suggestions or help in providing transportation "will be welcomed" at the Maryland State employment office in Silver Spring, it was said.

A training period will begin June 6. They will receive no compensation during the training period.

A physical examination will be given by county health authorities before a boy is admitted to the camp. Weekly health checkups will be made.

"Adequate recreation" is being planned for each camp.

High school boys interested in the plan, who must be at least 17 years old, may apply at the State Employment Office, 8511 Colesville Road, Silver Spring. Volunteer workers who wish to help in an advisory capacity may apply at the same office.

Bumper Wheat Crop Seen in Western Md.

Special Dispatch to The Post

Hagerstown, Md., May 26.—Farmers here reported prospects of a bumper crop of wheat, with some of the heads containing as many as 60 grains. Harvest is expected to get under way by mid-June, the crop being a week or ten days ahead of schedule, due to the warm spring.

Defendant Bursts Into Tears Presenting Case to Files Jury

Unexpected drama was provided in the trial of five persons charged with illegally removing Civil Service Commission records yesterday when one of the defendants withdrew in tears while attempting a personal plea for exoneration before the jury.

Lawrence L. Haynes, who has been allowed to represent himself in court subject to advice by counsel on procedure, broke down while quoting Assistant United States District Attorney Charles B. Murray on a statement that the defendant disclosed the facts of the case to the Times-Herald "to obtain financial assistance for myself and my family."

Brief Recess Granted

As the courtroom grew tense, Justice James W. Morris excused the District Court jury for a brief recess to give Haynes a few minutes to regain his composure.

Upon resuming his address to the jury, Haynes remarked with a lowered head: "I'm sorry, ladies and gentlemen. Let's try again."

Haynes was the first to present final defense arguments after the Government concluded its presentation. Reading from prepared notes most of the time, he reviewed the testimony and concluded with the assertion that he saw nothing wrong with the removal of the records at the time, and did not think so now.

Calls Himself Employe

Describing himself as merely an employe of the Standard Business Service, where it is said more than 20,000 records were taken for transcription into mailing lists, Haynes said he "stepped into a system already in operation."

Defense arguments also were presented by James A. O'Shea, attorney for Harlin G. Crandall, former Civil Service Commission employe; and William H. Collins, attorney for Walter A. C. Camp and Werner J. Orbach, Washington food merchants.

Sol M. Alpher, counsel for Miss Katherine Kay, whom the Government describes as financial secretary of the Standard Business Service, will address the jury today. It is expected the case will then go to the jury after a charge by Justice Morris.

'Politics' Seen In Coroner Ouster Bill

A pending bill to replace the District coroner's office with that of a medical examiner was described at Senate subcommittee hearings yesterday as an attempt to legislate Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald out of office.

The charge was made by A. D. Calvert, president of the Lincoln Park Citizens Association, who appeared in opposition to the measure at the second session of the hearings, being conducted by Senator Burton (Republican) of Ohio.

Calvert praised Dr. MacDonald's work, and said that his association could see no legitimate reason for reorganizing or changing the office.

The bill now being studied would abolish the coroner's jury system entirely and replace it with scientific investigation by a medical examiner.

MacDonald also testified aganst the bill at the meeting, asserting that he was opposed to doing away with the inquests and jury decisions on whether hocicide suspects should be committed.

He declared that the inquests developed evidence, gave all interested parties a chance to be heard, and protected the rights of the accused.

It also was reported that the new system would cost about $20,000 more to operate than the present one.

Senator Burton said that he would hold one more session on the bill next Tuesday mornng, stating that he would like to receive the opinion of police and prosecutors on the proposed change.

Chaplain C. W. Linsley officiated.

Price Limits Are Put On Sales at Auction

Goods may not be sold at auction above the price ceilings on over-the-counter transactions, the Office of Price Administration ruled yesterday.

OPA recognized that several persons at an auction might bid the ceiling price, resulting in a tie, and had this to say:

"The determination of which bid is to be accepted is not OPA's concern. However, a practical solution is drawing lots."

Traffic deaths this year 46
Deaths this date last year 33
District total last year 95

The District's forty-sixth traffic fatality this year was recorded yesterday with the death of a 31-year-old man, who died in Emergency Hospital of injuries suffered when struck by a truck last Saturday.

Robert Cook, of 621 Morton Street Northwest, died of head injuries after he had been struck by a truck in the 1500 block Seventh Street Northwest. Police said the truck was driven by Francis C. Stewart, 23, of Sixth-and-One-Half Street Southwest, who will appear at a coroner's inquest this week.

Four persons were killed by trains in Washington and nearby Maryland. They were: William H. Harmon, 75, of the Masonic and Eastern Star Home, 6000 New Hampshire Avenue Northeast; Mr. and Mrs. James G. Garrison, of Fredericksburg, Va.; Private Thurman McLamb, 25, of Nakina, N. C., stationed at Fort Meade.

Harmon was killed as he stepped in the path of the Capitol Limited to make way for an incoming train in the rear of the 6300 block of Blair Road Northeast. Harmon was hard of hearing and blind in one eye, police said, and did not hear or see the train that struck him. A native of Staunton, Va., Harmon moved to the Masonic institution about eight years ago and for two years served as night fireman. He was a member of Naval Lodge, No. 4, of Masons in Washington.

Mr. and Mrs. Garrison were killed when the motorcycle they were riding collided with a Pennsylvania Railroad freight train at a grade crossing near White Plains, Charles County, Md. Police said the train was being shifted by a locomotive as the motorcycle crashed into the side of one of the cars. Both died instantly.

Private McLamb was killed at the Baltimore and Ohio station at Laurel by a through train. There were no witnesses.

More Funds Sought For St. Elizabeth's

President Roosevelt yesterday asked Congress to vote a supplemental appropriation of $103,000 for St. Elizabeth's Hospital over and above amounts already given.

The extra funds are needed, he said, to meet increased costs of food, supplies and materials and to provide for the increased patient load resulting from expansion of the armed forces.

Attention, Aviators! Don't Drop Cigarettes

Richmond, Va., May 26 (AP).—Chief Fire Marshal James M. Hayes, jr., requested through the State Corporation Commission's division of aeronautics today that all those who fly refrain from tossing lighted cigaretts from airplanes.

He said that forest fire wardens had reported that in some instances the point of origin of fires had been in such isolated areas that no cause could be given unless a careless flier dropped a lighted cigar or cigarette from the air.

Fire Destroys Auto But Tires Are Saved

Frederick, Md., May 26 (AP).—The top and rear seat of an automobile owned by a Baltimore man burned before firemen from the Independent Hose Company got things under control.

"But we saved his tires," one fireman reported proudly.

April Traffic in District Drops Below Figures for Year Ago

A decided decrease in Washington traffic last month as compared to April, 1941, was revealed in the Highway Department's latest monthly traffic count.

Of 12 streets on which electric counters are maintained, seven showed drops ranging from 0.66 to 14.84 per cent. Five spots showed increases which ranged from 1.50 to 7.34. The 14.84 decrease was at one of the busiest blocks in the District—F Street between Thirteenth and Fourteenth Streets Northwest.

Most of the streets showing heavier traffic than last year's were those leading out of town, with Arlington Bridge showing the largest gain. This is accounted for by the flow of workers over to the new War Department Building.

Highway Director H. C. Whitehurst ascribed the decrease to gasoline and rubber shortage.

The list of the traffic counts follows:

$9,500,000 More Asked to Train War Workers

Another $9,500,000 appropriation for vocational education and training to prepare more workers for war jobs was approved yesterday by the House Appropriations Committee.

The appropriation would finance an increase from 976,000 trainees to 1,040,000 in preemployment courses and a rise from 736,000 to 988,000 in supplementary courses.

The committee reported that since Pearl Harbor there had been a "tremendous expansion" in war industry employment and a consequent demand for trained workers that required acceleration of the training program.

Persons in preemployment courses increased from 103,257 last July to an estimated 192,000 this month, and supplementary course enrollment increased from 153,911 to 192,000, the committee said.

Baptists Told Of Economic Shifts Coming

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, May 26.—Business, industry, education and religion cannot maintain their status quo in the new order of the post-war world, the president of the Northern Baptists convention declared today.

"We are in the midst of the mightiest revolution the race has ever seen," the Rev. William A. Elliott, of Ottawa, Kans., told first-day convention sessions.

"To experience no change would be contrary to all history. The greater the calamity, the wider the revolutionary processes, the lower sinks the level of morality, until a resurgence comes under the direction of a re-awakened faith."

Baptsts must unite spiritually, if not organically, to make worthwhile contributions to the revolutionary process, the convention president said, adding:

"I have not been an enthusiastic advocate of the organic union of all protestants. When contrary bodies unite, not always do they lose their contrariness, and union often breeds division. (But) I have preached and practiced the principles of spiritual unity."

Another speaker said the United States must work out a plan for feeding the millions now starving in Axis-occupied countries.

Noting some protests that feeding conquered peoples would aid the Axis, the Rev. L. B. Moseley, of Madison, Wis., declared in his convention keynote address:

"To those who advocate starving millions of people in order to destroy Hitler and his program, we must say that it was a starvation plan of coercion that gave Hitler his chance. It is our conviction that a reversal of that policy will relax the fear of being crushed, on which Hitler's regime is founded, and will form the friendship upon which, eventually, we must build a peace."

Spirit of Brotherhood Must Rule to Avoid Another War, Sayre Tells Presbyterians

By the Associated Press

Milwaukee, May 26.—A new world built on fundamentals of brotherhood taught by Christ is the "only kind of a world that will prevent a repetition of the present universal agony," Francis B. Sayre, United States High Commissioner to the Philippine Islands, asserted today.

Recounting scenes of suffering he had seen at Bataan and Corregidor, Sayre, in an address to the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church, asked "Is all that to be in vain?"

"I watched our troops when all the earth around them was rocking from exploding bombs and shells, bravely standing by their guns and taking it," he said. "Going through the hospital I have seen their wan faces lighting up with a smile as I approached, putting up a brave front still.

"I have seen them so badly burned that you could not tell whether their skins were white or black . . . their spirit was magnificent."

War and savagery have engulfed the world before, Sayre declared, "but never before—at least for 15 centuries—has there been such a world-wide breakdown of our underlying faiths, of our standards of moral values, of directing purpose in our lives."

Merely a military victory over the Axis nations will not bring a new world, he stated, adding: "A civilization based upon nothing but naked force cannot endure. . . . Only a world based on human brotherhood can endure."

Sayre said a world based upon human brotherhood would mean solving mass unemployment, removing from workers' minds "the haunting fear" of sickness and old age and recognition of the dependence of each national and racial group upon every other.

The Axis nations do not believe in human brotherhood, Sayre said. "They are fighting to establish themselves as master races of the world in order to enslave and exploit all other peoples."

Louisianan Tells Roosevelt He Can't Find Shangri, La.

President Roosevelt's Shangri-La stories are growing with every White House press conference. He told one again yesterday.

A subscriber to a newspaper in Louisiana wrote to the editor and asked his help in locating the place. He said he had studied maps of every parish in Louisiana, but had not yet found a Shangri, La.

The President first used Shangri-La, mythical paradise in James Hilton's "Lost Horizon," at the time American bombers raided Tokyo in mid-April. He said then that, at a White House dinner, a sweet young thing had asked him where the planes took off, and he told her Shangri-La. Later the President said two American battleships had gone to Shangri-La. The Berlin radio recently announced, in all seriousness, that German authorities had not been able to locate Shangri-La on the map.

Loss of Workers Irks Old-Line Agencies

Old-line agencies are losing employes to the new war agencies by the hundreds. And the old agencies don't like it. Interior Secretary Harold Ickes took up the grievance before the Senate Appropriations Committee in a discussion of salaries paid Federal workers. "The out-of line salaries," the outspoken Cabinet officer testified, "are not in the regular establishments. We feel their competition. The new agencies take our men away from us. There seems to be no limit to the salaries they can pay. They can outbid us, and I don't like that."

Ickes implied that he favored a rule that would prohibit an agency from offering a higher salary to an employe of another agency. If the employe were transferred, he would have to serve several months before his salary could be boosted under the Ickes plan. An executive order to that effect was issued several years ago. The Interior Secretary revealed that he had brought up the matter at a Cabinet meeting. Federal salaries was discussed when Senator Holman said he knew of a "clerk" in the Wage and Hour Division who was paid $5700 and who recently transferred to WPB's priorities division at $8500. "And I'm telling you he is a clerk," the Oregon Senator said.

Brig. Gen. Frank McSherry will be appointed chief of operations at the Man Power Commission. Criticism in high places is now being leveled at Paul McNutt for his slow-poke way in setting up the Man Power Commission . . . Public Buildings is putting the heat on some of its veteran employes to retire under the new liberalized retirement act. Work is slowing down at PBA as the Government's construction program is tied up in priorities knots . . . Lester Hemingway, the brother of Ernest, the author, will resign from WPB to join Federal Communications . . . Office of Price Administration has started to move into the Census Building.

It was 10:15 o'clock on a recent morning. Half a dozen Treasury officials gathered for a trip to the Capitol to testify before Congressional committees. A call was put in for a Treasury car to take them to the Capitol. No car was available, the officials were told, because:

Car No. 1 was waiting at the home of the Secretary to bring him to work.

Car No. 2 was being used to take the Secretary's dog somewhere.

Retakes for WPB Workers

WPB has dropped temporarily its plan to make each employe wear an identification badge with his picture on it. Pictures were taken of the employes but they nearly all looked like escaped convicts. Other pictures will be taken soon . . . Wardman Park Hotel has its own bus which is used to take its guests to work each morning . . . James Hasselman has left Agriculture to rejoin his old boss, Milo Perkins, at the Board of Economic Warfare . . . The Senate has restored funds for Interior's National Power Policy Committee. The House had refused it an appropriation. Ben Cohen, the brain-truster, worked for the committee but he contributes his services to it.

The faces of those House members who accused Stephen Raushenbush, chief of Research and Planning of Interior's Division of Power, should be red. The members accused him of Communist connections and they succeeded in getting the House to add a rider to the Interior bill that barred him from Federal service. The Senate committee reported: "The committee recommends that the department be at liberty to continue to employ Mr. Rausenbush as it sees fit. In the opinion of the committee, the statements made about Mr. Rausenbush are completely without fact and are wholly unjustified."

The Senate also restored Interior's information division which had been eliminated by the House but on a reduced basis . . . WPB has its own special plane which is used to fly officials around the country . . . Hal Bancroft is leaving Donovan's office for WPB . . . Several weeks ago it was reported that a 35 billion dollar appropriation request would be sent to Congress by the President. The request was delayed. Now the 35 billions have grown to 45 billions

American Ingenuity

Cleveland, May 26 (AP).—The street department put up a detour sign while repairmen were doing a resurfacing job, but motorists didn't pay much attention to the warning. A foreman solved the problem by erecting a substitute sign which reads: "Good Americans will detour—damn Japs won't." Everybody is detouring now.

LEGISLATORS ARE HONORED GUESTS—Sixth annual banquet of the Brotherhood Bible Class of Hamline-Methodist Church was held last night in the parish hall, Sixteenth and Allison Streets Northwest. Barbara Heiss is shown serving some of the notables who were guests. Air Raid Test Won't Give Pupils Holiday

School children will be sent to refuges in the schools rather than be evacuated in next Tuesday's daylight air raid test, Rober L. Haycock, assistant superintendent of schools, announced last night.

This will set a precedent on the disposition of school children during an actual raid. The Office of Civilian Defense has had a varying policy in regard to schools, and its last ruling, that the children should be kept in the buildings, has been disregarded by many communities.

Haycock said that he thought it best that the 91,000 District school children remain indoors. Each teacher has been named an air raid warden, with the principal of each school as chief. Classes will be suspended during the half-hour alarm period some time between 10 and 11 a. m. and the children will march to designated shelters.

Defense Coordinator John Russell Young last night appealed to the public to use the telephone as little as possible during the test. Although this will not be a trial of the communications system, as the last two blackouts were, still there will be a number of imaginary incidents given out by chiefs of the various services for their volunteers to act upon. Young wants the telephone exchanges clear to relay the reports to the control center.

Corporation Counsel Richmond B. Keech is working on minor variations in the blackout regulations to make them applicable to daylight tests. A ruling on the speed at which emergency vehicles may travel is one of the points Keech has under consideration.

Metal Worker Guilty of Attack On D. C. Schoolgirl

A Prince Georges County (Md.) Circuit Court jury last night convicted William T. Moore, 32-year-old white Washington metal worker, of the rape of a 16-year-old District high school girl during a blackout test March 3.

Judge Charles Marbury, presiding at the trial at Upper Marlboro, withheld sentence. A maximum penalty of death is provided by Maryland law.

Moore, who lives at 1328 E Street Southeast, was accused of attacking the girl near Oxon Hill, Md., after offering her a lift home during the blackout as she left a Southeast Washington 10-cent store, where she was employed part-time.

Instead of driving to her home nearby, Moore went through Anacostia to a point 4 miles below Oxon Hill, where the attack occurred, the girl charged.

She reported the rape the following morning.

Raid Wardens Pull Phony 'Leap to Death' in Exhibition

More than 2000 passersby witnessed one of Washington's most realistic first aid demonstrations last night when two air raid wardens simulated a jump from the ninth floor of the New Amsterdam Apartments, Fourteenth and Fairmont Streets Northwest.

The crowd gathered when David Bennett, an air raid warden, appeared at the ledge of the roof garden and waved his arms. A few moments later officials of the Zone 6 post directed attention to the inert form of Lawrence Sparshott, another warden, who lay "bleeding" on the lawn.

First aid workers of the post then "treated" Sparshott's "injuries" as they explained the proceedings to spectators. When the "victim" had been properly bandaged, an ambulance drove up and Sparshott was carried away.

Frank J. Harvey, zone warden, said that the post of Zone 6, located in the lobby of the New Amsterdam Apartments, is one of the most completely equipped posts in the District. Headquarters were donated by Lewis Jackson, assistant zone warden and manager of the building.

Car Pools Suggested For Red Cross Classes

Because attendance at some District Red Cross home nursing classes has fallen off since gas rationing went into effect, members of such classes are urged by Caroline Thomson, director, to form car pools.

"We must remember that we are faced with a serious shortage of hospital beds and trained nurses, particularly in Washington," she pointed out. "Every girl and woman, from Girl Scout to grandmother, may do her part by making sure she is able to care for ill members of her family in her own home."

One class that is short of the required membership is at St. Ann's Church, 4404 Wisconsin Avenue Northwest, in session on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 1 to 3 p. m. Registrations may be made with Mrs. E. F. Langan, 3623 Fessenden Street Northwest.

Locations Offered For Day Nursery

Establishment of a municipally operated day nursery for children of working mothers moved closer yesterday, with location troubles probably solved.

Mrs. Frank A. Linzel, chairman of a District defense council committee seeking a suitable house that may be rented, said that at least 10 good prospects have been volunteered. The hearty response, she said, came after a public appeal she made Sunday through the newspapers.

Previously efforts to rent a house with at least six rooms and adequate yard space had been fruitless.

Mrs. Linzel said members of her committee on child care and protection, a unit of the defense council's civilian mobilization division, will inspect all of the likely houses that were offered for rent.

Meantime, launching of a day nursery at Howard University for Negro children whose parents must work is awaiting approval by the District Commissioners.

Service Men's Packages Will Be Forwarded

Packages sent by express to service men who have been transferred will be reshipped to them in this country without extra charge, according to a Railway Express Agency announcement.

This arrangement, effective immediately, applies to shipments of 20 pounds or less, addressed to domestic military or naval posts and camps. Shipments over 20 pounds will be held at the point addressed until the sender can be notified and can arrange for the payment of extra cost for sending the package to the new location.

Perishable and fragile foodstuffs are eligible to be sent express, but utmost care should be taken in their shipment, especially during warm weather, according to Railway Express.

Defense Post Display For Trinidad Area

An air raid warden will be on duty at the Trinidad Area post, in the rear of 1611 Montello Avenue Northeast, from 7 to 9 p. m. daily except Sunday so that citizens may inspect the post and discuss civilian defense with their warden.

Sale of Seats For Parade to Aid Army Relief Fund

Special stands for spectators at Washington's Memorial Day parade Saturday will be erected on Constitution Avenue and 40 per cent of the proceeds from admissions will go to Army Emergency Relief, the War Department announced yesterday.

Seats for 7500 will ge provided between Fifteenth and Sixteenth Streets, opposite the reviewing stand.

Grand stand seats immediately facing the reviewing stand will sell for 75 cents and $1.25 while bleacher seats will be 25 cents for children and 50 cents for adults.

Tickets are available at the American Automobile Association, Seventeenth Street and Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest, and the Keystone Automobile Club, 1643 Connecticut Avenue.

Murphy Will Resume Fire Training Job

Reluctantly Leaves Civilian Defense Post, But Plans to Aid His Successor

Chief Air Raid Warden Clement Murphy will be relieved of his warden job and return to full-time work in the Fire Training School as soon as a successor can be found and trained for the job, Defense Co-ordinator John Russell Young announced yesterday.

Murphy, who has been chief of the warden service since its inception last fall, had made several verbal requests during the winter to be allowed to give up the warden duties and devote his full time to his regular job as drillmaster in the training school. He said the ourden of both jobs was too much for one man to carry.

On May 6 he made formal request to leave the warden service. This was indorsed by Fire Chief Stephen Porter, but Young, acting both as Co-ordinator and as District Commissioner, delayed approval of the request until Murphy renewed it yesterday.

Resignation Accepted

"In a conference with the Commissioner I replied to his invitation to remain in charge of the warden service by renewing my request," Murphy said. "I shall devote all the time necessary to help my successor familiarize himself with his new responsibilities."

Young said that he accepted the resignation "with great reluctance."

"Because of the great value of Chief Murphy not only as an instructor of the army of volunteers under hm but as an administrator and leader of men, I have given long consideration and thought to this matter before acceding to the chief's urgent request," Young added.

He said that he realized that many volunteers in the warden service, who last week filed formal protest against Murphy's quitting, would be "disappointed" at his action, but stated that in justice to the general welfare of the Fire Department he "could not do otherwise than to surrender to these appeals.'

Successor Unnamed

No successor has yet been named, Young indicated that there would be no acting chief warden appointed, but that Murphy would continue until a permanent chief is chosen. Previously, Maj. Raoul Leance LeGendre, assistant to District Defense Executive Lemuel Bolles had beer. mentioned as a possible acting Chief Air Raid Warden.

Lieut. W. H. Ronan and Private R. V. Denton, Murphy's assistants in the warden service, were also returned to full-time duty in the Fire Department.

2 at Holy Names Win Scholarships To Notre Dame

Two seniors of the Academy of the Holy Names, Silver Spring, Md., have won scholarships to Notre Dame College of Maryland it was announced yesterday.

Patsy Lavery, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lavery, formerly of Washington, now of Williamsburg, Va., was awarded a full four-year scholarship. Eleanor Giusta, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Giusta, 703 Wayne Avenue, Silver Spring, received a half scholarship. The same girls after examination at Immaculata Junior College were awarded full scholarships for the two-year course at the Washington institution.

Another Silver Spring girl, Virginia Peter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Peter, 9611 Colesville Road, is the recipient of a scholarship to Temple Secretarial School.

As a result of a competitive examination given at the academy the following won full scholarships to the school: Rose Marie Winslow from St. Michael's School; Betty deMontfredy from St. Gabriel's School; Frances Granger from Nativity School, and Mary Haley from Our Lady of Lourdes School.

Howard University School of Music presents an open-air performance of Ruggiero Leoncavallo's "Pagliacci" on the campus Tuesday night. Cast of characters:

Canio ..... Chauncey Brown
Nedda ..... Vivian Collier
Tonio ..... Elmer Harris
Silvio ..... William P. Robinson
Peppe ..... Irving Hunter
Conductor: Kai de Vermond

A large audience assembled before Frederick Douglas Memorial Hall on the campus of Howard University last evening to witness a performance of Leoncavallo's "Pagliacci" staged in the open air under the artistic direction of Kai de Vermond. While the orchestra, successively conucted by Sylvanus Hart and Louis Vaughn Jones, played as curtain-raisers to the tragic opera the overture to "Martha" and the first movement of Schubert's B minor symphony, hazy clouds cleared away in the twilight, and the moon shone down upon the massed spectators and the singing actors and the play began. The performance was virtually a celebration of the opera's golden anniversary, as it took place only five days more than 50 years after the first production in Milano on May 21, 1892.

BROWN

To single out one of the principals as the vocal star of the production would be unfair to the others, for they all sang with fine intonation, clarity in phrasing and emotional verisimilitude. In the cast were Chauncey Brown as Canio, Vivian Collier as Nedda, Elmer Harris as Tonio, William P. Robinson as Silvio and Irving Hunter as Peppe. The chorus was so numerous as to give the illusion of an entire village population, and there was an unusual touch of realism in the presence of many small boys to activate the scene.

Considering the fact that nearly all the participants were university students who had snatched time from their classes and occupations for rehearsals, the performance was very commendable in its coherence and vivacity. There were, to be sure, some moments of awkwardness on the stage, and the tempo occasionally lagged during the first act, but those were accidents of amateurism which elude the most vigilant stage manager and conductor. The production can be set down as a credit to the School of Music, which was initiated 40 years ago by Lula V. Childers, still the acting director.

Among those who assisted Kai de Vermond in the preparations were Carolyn V. Grant and William J. Goodwin, directors of the glee clubs; Levington Smith, director of the boys' chorus; Mary Formwalt, coach and pianist; James W. Butcher, jr., stage director, and Louise Burge, director back stage. From the student body were Beulah Jenton, assistant to the director, and Edmond Gordon, assistant stage manager.

3 Youths Slug Keeper, Flee Rockville Jail

Warden Duped by 2 Into Opening Cell; 1 Prisoner, Refusing To Join Break, Felled

Three youthful prisoners made a dramatic escape from the Montgomery County Jail, Rockville, last night after slugging the assistant warden into unconsciousness and fleeing with his keys.

The prisoners are James A. Anderson, 17, of Glen Echo, Md., awaiting trial on a charge of raping a 36-year-old woman last February in Glen Echo; Andrew Foster, 211, serving 200 days for unauthorized use of an automobile; and Clifton Yokley, 23, of Germantown, Md., charged with assault.

Hugh Walker, assistant warden, said he was called to a cell by Foster, a trusty barber, who was cutting the hair of Yokley. As he opened the cell door, Walker said, Foster hit him on the head with a sock loaded with soap, knocking him unconscious.

Foster and Yokley then took the jailer's keys and opened another cell to release Anderson, sharing an adjoining cell with Thurman Rigdon. Rigdon, however, would not join in the break and when he attempted to sound an alarm, he was knocked out. The three prisoners then fled from the jail.

Anderson had been in jail since February 21. He was arrested on charges of raping a woman in a cottage in Glen Echo where he had taken refuge after shooting at a policeman who had gone to the youth's home on a "trouble call." After attacking the woman, police said Anderson robbed the woman of $7 and fled in her car. He was arrested by United States Park Police in a drive-in restaurant in Arlington, Va.

Anderson was scheduled to go on trial next Monday in Hagerstown, Md., having been granted a change of venue by the Montgomery County Circuit Court. Police said he had recently fashioned a make-believe pistol from a bar of soap apparently intending to use it in an attempted jailbreak. The jailer, however, discovered it in his cell.

Rooms Plentiful in District, Rezoning Hearing Witness Says

There is no need to relax zoning restrictions against rooming houses in Washington because there is already a plentiful supply of rooms available, a Houst District subcommittee was told yesterday.

The assertion was made by Mrs. Helen Duey Hoffman, director of the Washington Housing Association and chief witness at the first session of hearings on the bill to suspend the zoning bans for the duration.

They are scheduled to resume at 10 a. m. today.

Opposing the bill as "unnecessary and undesirable," Mrs. Hoffman asserted that her organization had registered 4875 empty roms here on May 20. Moreover, she said, there is a backlog of about 50,000 hitherto unrented rooms in private homes that are gradually being made available.

"The indicrimininate use of dwellings in A-restricted and A-semirestricted areas for boarding and lodging house purposes during the emergency will permanently injure the value of the single family residential areas," she declared. "In time this will affect the tax structure."

Both she and Engineer Commissionler Kutz who also testified against passage of the bill pointed out that the Zoning Commission already has power to make exceptions to zoning regulations if it so desires.

Only witness testifying in behalf of the legislation was Representative Cochran (Democrat) of Missouri, who advocated several technical changes in the bill.

However both committee members present — Representatives Schulte (Democrat) of Indiana, and Hebert (Democrat) of Louisiana,—expressed themselves as in favor of the measure.

Schulte likened the housing situation here to "another Dunkirk," which should be combatted with every means "under the sun."

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

'Candida' Has Overcome Unique Casting Difficulties

Stars Have Dodged Films and Prior 'Dates;' Two Musicals Perch on Opposite Poles; Items of News and Gossip of the Theater

THERE IS MORE than meets the eye in the casting of the revival of Shaw's "Candida," coming to the National Theater on Monday for a week's engagement under the auspices of the American Theater Wing War Service for Army and Navy Relief.

RAYMOND MASSEY

Katharine Cornell, appearing in her third production of the play, of course is not perplexed by motion picture commitments—through personal preference and not necessity—or bound by enlistment to any of the armed services. Like all the rest of the cast, she is donating her services to the present project as a patriotic contribution to the war effort. But for some of them it is not such a simple matter.

Raymond Massey, opposite Miss Cornell in the role of the Rev. James Mavor Morrell, for example, has three times set back a Hollywood assignment with the Warner Brothers that he might continue in these benefit performances, which have expanded from a tentative few into a prolonged run to standing-room audiences. Having been an officer in the Canadian army in the first World War, he feels deeply in the matter of service. Especially so, since his son is joining the Royal Canadian Air Force.

Then there is the case of Burgess Meredith. "Buzz" was in the uniform of the United States Army Air Corps, at Santa Ana, Calif., when ordered by the War Department to take the role of Marchbanks in the "Candida" revival. His leave ran out long before the Broadway run of the play. Mr. Meredith, however, saw to that by making an early morning air trip from New York to Washington and back, to make sure of the extension of his assignment in time to play the matinee in New York on the day his leave normally would have expired.

Brenda Forbes, too, has juggled her contracts to avail herself of the privilege of appearing in the Theater Wing's all-star cast. She was replaced in the cast of the Theater Guild's "Yesterday's Magic," starring Paul Muni, in order that she might replace Mildred Natwick in "Candida." And that's the way it has gone and why the National's most successful season in years will end in a blaze of glory.

Two musical pictures, booked into "opposition" houses under the same management in the same week, sounds a little screwy, but that is how it sometimes comes out. This week in the Loew houses, for instance. Come tomorrow, the Palace will have "My Gal Sal," costarring Rita Hayworth and Victor Mature, and the Capitol will break out "Ship Ahoy," costarring Eleanor Powell, recently here with the Hollywood Victory Caravan, and Red Skelton, recently here any number of times—but not too recently. The point is that these two subjects are as far apart as the poles in both content and treatment. "My Gal Sal" is one of those nostalgic numbers, harking back to those allegedly "gay nineties" for its music and modes, while "Ship Ahoy" is a strictly 1942 model, as up to the minute in its topic, tunes and dances as tomorrow morning's headlines. If either one is a carbon copy of the other, then "Charley's Aunt" is an identical tracing of "Hamlet."

Another Important Documentary

Unless all signs fail—and they sometimes do—a short-reel subject of vital importance will be coming along to the screen at Loew's Columbia Theater sometime in June. It is an item called "There's a Job to Be Done," with an inspirational foreword by Donald M. Nelson, principally concerned in the doing of it. The essential role in the war effort of alloy steels is at the base of it. Practically everything pertaining to this particular aspect of the production task is made clear in the picture. Mr. Schickelgruber and the Nips wouldn't care much for it, but there's a real wallop in it for American audiences.

While we were on the subject of Army and Navy Relief yesterday, and the part the theaters are playing in it, we meant to mention that in the 11-day theater drive which closed last Sunday night, the Trans-Lux Theater turned in a total of $3,179.42. Young patriots from the Boys' Club of the District were volunteer assistants to Manager Roland Robbins and his staff in collecting this sizable sum.

Two Jolly Tars Give the Sign!

JINX FALKENBURG AND JOAN WOODBURY busy lifting the morale of the service men in Columbia's "Sweetheart of the Fleet," the new frolic in which Joan Davis provides the "comedy relief" for their ardent romanticism. And what's wrong with the title? Elemental, my dear Watson. It should be plural!

If loud huzzahs were heard from the general direction of Bolling Field at about the socalled witching hour last night, it was because Managing Director Gene Ford and Harry Krivit, of Loew's Capitol, took their entire stage show over to regale the boys, following the last performance on F Street. It was an especial thrill to the youthful Miriam La Velle, the star dancer appearing with Artie Shaw's Orchestra, for more reasons than one. At her age, she hasn't been through too many wars and, besides that, there's a heart over there. Brother of a lad who's bringing his band into another downtown theater this Friday. And she'll probably sic that thimble-sized Penelope on me for mentioning it!

So overwhelmingly has it caught on that "Port of Shadows," costarring Michele Morgan and Jean Gabin, is being continued through today on the screen at the Hiser Theater, out Bethesda way.

When George Werner, formerly of the booking department of the local Warner Brothers theaters, took up his commission as lieutenant in the United States Navy, he really started something. James W. "Buster" Root, formerly manager of the Tivoli, was promoted to the office vancancy and that started the ball rolling. Alan J. Bachrach, manager of the Calvert, was promoted to the Tivoli; Claude Land, from the Kennedy to the Calvert; Sidney Hoffman, from the Colony to the Kennedy; Raymond O. Burch, from the Seco to the Colony; George Colliflower, assistant manager of the Calvert, to the Seco, as manager; David Buckner, from student manager at the Seco to the Calvert, as assistant manager.

It-Could-Happen Note

Not in the same theater, to be sure, but they'd make a nice marquee sign for a double bill, at that:

"SHIP AHOY"
"THE INVADERS"

Casting About for Star Cast

Hollywood, Calif., May 26. Warners are plenty smart in casting "Watch on the Rhine." They'll bring Paul Lukas, Lucile Watson and Eric Roberts from the original Broadway cast for the picture. Those, together with Bette Davis, should really be something. Lillian Hellman's been in town for two weeks, polishing up the script. Again she's missed the lilacs and dogwood in her Connecticut garden. She tells me the play opened in London with Diana Wynyard, and it's a smash hit.

PAUL LUKAS

Mae West's got a honey of an idea for her next picture. Its title is "A Date with Hitler," which opens up an endless vista of funny possibilities. I'm only hoping she'll go through with it.

When Claudette Colbert and Merle Oberon were auctioning off kisses in Boston with the Caravan, Claudette got top price $1000. Cary Grant got second—$500, from a dear old lady who rushed on the stage, gave him a terrific hug and smacker, pushed a roll of bills into his hand, which he stuffed into his pocket uncounted. She was waiting for him later at the stage door, and said, "I was so excited that I gave you $1200—all the money I've got. Do you suppose I could have my change back?"

Mary Rogers, Will's daughter, will marry in the very near future Leonard Haynes, rich oil man who's now managing an ammunition factory in Burlington, Iowa.

Director Sam Wood and Gary Cooper are like a couple of kids with a new toy train. They've actually been invited to sit in the dug-out of the New York Yankees by Joe McCarthy and Bill Dickey, and they can hardly wait to take advantage of those invitations.

When Tyrone Power leaves for the Navy, he'll will his trailer dressing room to Roddy McDowall. All I've got to say is that Roddy has a flock of gin-rummy playing ahead, if he keeps up the tradition.

Ginger Rogers is spending a couple weeks snagging fish on her Oregon ranch. I wish she'd smoke a couple of steelhead trout for me. Nothing more tasty in this world.

Charlie Ruggles maintains that this act of Congressmen sidestepping gas rationing by getting "X" cards may result in a lot of X-Congressmen.

Bill Orr has got an offer to repeat the impersonations he did for "Meet the People," in Billy Rose's New York Aquacade. Did you know Billy put a lot of his millions into huge diamonds?

Whoever started that story that Veronica Lake had gone strawberry blond must've been seeing red. She's still as blond as corn silk.

RKO is planning a horse and buggy premiere for Lum and Abner's "The Bashful Bachelor" when it opens here at the Hawaii Theater.

Sue Carroll has dropped a lot of excess poundage since her marriage to Alan Ladd, and looks but spiffy. Maybe she'll return to pictures.

Seems Director Richard Thorpe should have a big pat on the back for "Joe Smith, American"—a sleeper that became such a big "A" that if one of our million-dollar directors had done it, he'd be taking bows all over the town.

When she read a drama critic's rave in Bradford, Pa., Margaret Lindsay sent a note of thanks. She addressed it to M. A. L., the by-line on the column, and the letter of acknowledgement came back signed Margaret A. Lindsey. Get it?

I wonder which artist Columbia will insult by asking him to paint pictures to be used in "My Sister Eileen." Pictures are subject to ridicule throughout the whole thing, and knowing the sensitivity of most wielders of the brush, from house painters down, I imagine none of them will be too anxious for the job. The artist is a Greek named Apopolous, which will be played either by Gregory Ratoff or George Tobias, both Russians.

When John Archer married Marjorie Lord, John was doing the lead in "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch" and Marjorie the lead in "About Face." They made a bet to see who would get a studio contract first. Three days later, Marjorie was signed by Universal, but the event occurred on John's birthday, so he got all the presents anyway.

Universal Signs Lon Chaney Anew

Lon Chaney, Universal's character stare, has just been handed a new contract by that studio. He is currently working with Richard Dix and Wendy Barrie in "Eyes of the Underworld."

Chaney is winding up his eleventh year on the screen, where he began as an extra.

Among his recent pictures have been "Wolf Man" and "Ghost of Frankenstein," in which he outdid his famous father in the matter of intricate make-ups.

Gloria Stuart Wins Acclaim At the Olney

By Nelson B. Bell

"THE NIGHT OF JANUARY 16TH." S. E. Cockran presents the melodrama in three acts by Ayn Rand. Staged by John Hayden settings by Charles Squires. At the Olney Theater.

THE CAST.

Clerk of the Court.....George Spelvin
Judge Heath.....Walter Cartwright

Defense Atty. Stevens...Richard Midgely
Dr. Kirkland.....Ray McCormack
Mrs. John Hutchins.....Susan Cooper
Karen Andre.....Gloria Stuart

Sivurd Junquest.....Robert Henderson
Larry Regan.....Donald McClelland
Roberta Van Rensselaer.....Gerry Carr

That trickily contrived and largely baffling dramatization of a mystifying murder trial, known by the name of "The Night of January 16th," was given an interesting, tense and workmanlike performance in the Olney Theater last night, with Gloria Stuart, of Hollywood renown, as an especially charming and unaffected guest star.

Washington already is familiar with the unique construction of this examination of the processes and problems of a criminal courtroom; how the jury sitting on the case is impaneled from the audience; how those able to give pertinent testimony looking to the solution of the penthouse murder of a brigand of big business make their entrance from the front of the house, and how it is possible for the jury's verdict to be either guilty or innocent without impairment of the dramatic climax of the play. It was all maneuvered smoothly and skillfully last evening.

The cast of this second bill of the Olney's summer season is rather more numerous than last week's, but as uniformly capable and sure in their parts as the one that gave such a lusty interpretation of "George Washington Slept Here."

Star Scores Decisively

Although not the most conspicuous in the three acts, except in the matter of constant presence and serving as pivot of the whole proceeding, the role of Karen Andre, the accused on trial for her life, is made one of the most impressive by the quiet effectiveness of Miss Stuart. She brings to the part not only the delicate beauty for which she was famed on the screen, but high intelligence and discretion as an actress in addition. Miss Stuart is a young woman of fine poise, grace and expressive voice, who gives the impression of being very much the lady, in spite of the implications of the testimony delivered against her.

As the prosecuting attorney and counsel for the defense, respectively, Richard Irving and Richard Midgely, give excellent accounts of themselves. Director John Hayden, masquerading as the ubiquitously anonymous figure in the theater, "George Spelvin," makes the clerk of the court a drolly amusing fellow, and Valerie Valaire scores a decisive comedy hit as Magda Swenson, the penthouse maid with an ax to grind.

Last night's responsive audience was one of vast enthusiasm that made it obvious that those being kept away from this splendidly equipped, professional summer theater by the prevalent short rationings of gasoline and tires are the victims of a very genuine deprivation. The Olney is presenting grade-A "straw hat" entertainment and deserves to be packed at every performance.

Blackfriars

A merry group of youngsters are cavorting these nights across the boards of the St. Paul Rectory stage. Taking a leaf from their brothers (and sisters) in New York, the Washington Chapter of the Blackfriars' Guild is presenting an enjoyable farce of embryonic actors whose ambition to work in the theater leads them into many difficult but highly humorous situations. Their solutions to their problems will give you many moments of high glee.

"Out of the Frying Pan" is the story of all those young actors who come to New York and band together in a happy communal, hoping and working for a chance at fame and success in the theater. They live in a typical brownstone front, these youngsters, and in between making the rounds of the various producers they rehearse among themselves and think of ingenious methods of getting past the emmanuenci who dwell in the outer precincts of the sanctum sanctorum.

Whit Vernon has done a swell job of directing, from which the New York production might have taken a few hints. Imagination and a nice setting have gone a long way toward balancing the somewhat limited talents of the cast. Everybody seems to have worked hard and they have come up with a very pleasant show. We may expect better things from this group in the future. Prominent among the cast are J. Loren Freund, Alyse Bergman, Margaret Ryan, Dorothea Di Girolamo and William Draper.

Two more performances will be given; tonight and tomorrow night.

D. C. Asks Senate Committee To Restore $360,000 to Budget

District Commissioners and municipal department heads yesterday asked a Senate Appropriations subcommittee to restore approximately $360,000 of House-slashed funds to the District budget appropriation for 1943, and add $64,354 to finance the new recreation commission.

Replacement of funds for a new fire station, a new precinct police station, an Anacostia library branch, additional Health Department nurses, and numerous personnel increases were requested as the Senate group opened hearings on the supply bill for the coming fiscal year.

As it came from the House, the bill carried $56,137,171—the largest budget appropriation ever voted for the District, but still a decrease of almost half a million dollars from the Commissioners' estimates.

The largest single item which the Senate group, headed by Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat) of Wyoming, is being asked to put back in is $110,000 for the construction of an engine house at North Capitol and Crittenden Streets Northwest.

Projected for some time, the fire station would service the Fort Totten Park area—a recently and rapidly built up section. Surveys and plans for the station were financed by Congress last year.

Designed to cut down the oversized Eleventh Precinct, all that area east of the Anacostia River, the proposed police station would cost an additional $40,000, the Commisioners estimated. Though a site has not yet been selected, it is planned in the general vicinity of Forty-second Street and Benning Road Northeast.

The subcommittee was warned that such a division in the Eleventh Precinct is necessary if the police are to patrol it properly.

An authorization of about $60,000 also was asked to hire and equip 32 additional nurses for the Health Department. Health officials asserted that the city's nursing staff is definitely inadequate, and that 142 new nurses were needed to bring the staff up to United States Health Service standards.

Numerous scattered increases were asked in the public library appropriation, topped by a $30,000 request for the establishment of a sub-branch in Anacostia—the section whose population has been most swollen by defense workers.

Requests for funds with which to increase personnel in many branches which felt the House economy axe most heavily, were presented again. Among these were the Public Utilities Commission and the Board of Public Welfare, both of which were denied employe increases by the House.

The wherewithal to hire extra school custodians and clerks, sanitary inspectors, food inspectors, gas meter inspectors and District National Guard record clerks also was asked.

Should all the requests be granted by the Senate group, the appropriation would be brought up to about $50,560,000 including the newly asked recreation money.

Police Pay Rise Before Committee Today

Proposed pay raises for police and firemen here and legislation to exempt out-of-town corporations from paying a District income tax will be among the seven bills to be studied by the Senate District Committee at 10:30 a. m. today.

The pay raise bill would give police and firemen $300 more annually. The second measure would free non-District businesses from tax liability provided they do not actually conclude their deals in the District.

Other measures to be considered would:

Substitute the lethal gas chamber for the electric chair.

Set up a special license classification for drivers of funeral cars and private ambulances.

Permit the Commissioners to assign police officers to the detective force.

Authorize a memorial at Gallinger Hospital to George E. Chamberlain, former Senator from Oregon, who was one of the leading Congressional sponsors of the hospital.

Provide for retirement benefits to judges of the present municipal and police courts, who do not now hold judicial office.

TOO FAT?
MAKE THIS 1 WEEK TEST
See How Easy Reducing is this New VITAMIN WAY

Don't think you have to give up entirely eating foods you like to lose weight. Now you can actually EAT PLENTY and even eat fats and sweets and yet, at the same time, shed those ugly pounds of figure-spoiling fat—and do it so easily you'll think it's fun instead of trouble.

Here's all you do. First of all, forget any violent exercise. Don't take drugs, physics, or go on any weakening starvation diets.

Lose Lbs.—EAT PLENTY

Just eat your regular breakfast and your regular dinner or supper. Don't give up fats, sweets or starches. Just cut down a little. But here's the plan. For lunch, take 2 tablespoonfuls of VITREN in a glass of any fruit juice or just with water if you prefer. With it, if you like, a cup of tea or coffee, and you won't need anything else.

VITREN provides all the nourishment you need for lunch—probably far more than you usually get. It contains Vitamins A, B, C, D and G, as well as calcium, phosphorus and strength building proteins, so that while you are forgetting the foods that make or keep you fat, you are actually adding to your nourishment—building up your strength and energy. Best of all, you DON'T MIND confining your lunch to VITREN and a beverage because it satisfies your appetite.

Test VITREN for 1 week. If you don't start losing that ugly fat—and if you don't feel fine—peppier and more vigorous than you've been in months, bring back the unused VITREN and get every penny back. Start losing today this modern pleasant way. VITREN costs little to use.

Sundra Beats Athletics, 8-3, for Nats' 3d Straight

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ Harry Cooper's 138 Takes P. G. A. Medal

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

Philadelphia, May 26.—The new order is here for the Philadelphia Athletics. Connie Mack has benched Outfielder Bob Johnson and Catcher Frank Hayes, and when he scans his lineup these days he sees not even a faint reminder of the Athletics of the late thirties.

POVICH

The upheaval is complete. Harold Wagner, a lad who has worked his way up in the A's farm system, has beaten the veteran Hayes out of the No. 1 catching job. No pitcher with the club has more than a three-year history with the A's. First Baseman Dick Siebert, serving his fourth season with Mack, is the oldest inhabitant of a regular job.

Two years ago a gangling high school kid from Easton, Pa., walked into Shibe Park and asked for a tryout. Mack signed him to a Wilmington contract and today he's the A's regular shortstop. His name is Jack Wallaesa and he's playing shortstop in defiance of all theories that a player of his 6 foot 4-inch stature is too tall to dig ground balls out of the dirt with consistent success or coordinate his long limbs in the niceties of big league infield play.

Young Wagner, though, seems to be the rising star of Connie Mack's new order team. All of a sudden he has blossomed as a stylish young catcher who has the added grace of hitting ability. It is very doubtful if Hayes will regain the regular catching job. Washington fans may remember young Wagner. He was the rookie catcher of the A's in the riot game at Griffith Stadium a few years ago. Buddy Myer, who narrowly escaped getting hit with a bean ball, later reached base and all but undressed Wagner with a high slide into home that put the catcher out of action for a month.

Johnson and Hayes Are on the Market

Both Johnson and Hayes have been put on the market by Mack. For years Johnson has been renowned as the league's best spring hitter, but this season he hasn't been hitting even in the spring, with his current average around .250. And Johnson, for some reason has never been a favorite with Shibe Park fans. He has been the most booed home-town player in Shibe Park history. Johnson, however, will probably end his big league career in the uniform of the A's, inasmuch as there are no takers.

Mack may have himself to blame for the failure of Hayes to round into good playing form. When his hard-hitting catcher took himself a wife before the spring practice started, the generous Mack gave him an all-expense honeymoon as a wedding gift. Hayes took on weight he has never shed, and has been unable to untrack himself at bat.

The A's have been bolstered in a couple of spots, notably at third base where Mr. Mack has installed Lou Blair after claiming him from the Yankees at the waiver price. Blair was with Newark, but the Yankees shied from bringing him in on account of a trick knee injury. However, Blair's knee has been standing up very well since he joined the A's and at $7500 he has been one of the better winter bargains.

Dee Miles, Former Nat, in Rightfield

In left field Dee Miles has supplanted Bob Johnson. Washington once owned Miles and there never was any doubt of his mechanical ability. He hits well, throws well, moves fast on the bases and in the outfield, but he lacks aggression and otherwise is not rated as very smart. The best outfielder on Mack's club is Mike Kreevich, obtained from the White Sox, and Kreevich has been in a three-year hitting slump. In right field is Elmer Valo, up from Wilmington. Valo looked like the world's greatest hitter in his brief trial last fall. But big league pitching seems to have caught up with him.

The best feature of the A's is Mack's pitching staff. The old gentleman has come up with some very estimable pitching after years of suffering in that department. The prize of the lot is Phil Marchildon, a French-Canadian lad who was a hockey player until he discovered his pitching talents. He has already won six games for the A's.

Roger Woolf, a young right-hander up from Williamsport, has been prettying the pitching picture for Mack, too. He has won four games at this point, numbering two wins over the Red Sox. Dick Fowler from Toronto and Russ Christopher, another claim from the Yankees, round out a pitching staff that could get by very nicely with a little more hitting support which the A's, unhappily don't own. There isn't a .300 hitter on Mack's new order ball club.

On the Line

—With CONSIDINE

A Study in Nonchalance—Williams' Enlistment

New York, May 26.—Not since Hank Gowdy strolled into a recruiting parlor in 1917 and humbly inquired, "How do you go about joining this man's Army?" has an outstanding athlete enlisted more casually than did Ted Williams.

CONSIDINE

Without fanfare, without even mentioning it to Tom Yawkey, Eddie Collins, Joe Cronin or Phil Troy, Williams simply signed up. The first news his bosses had of the enlistment came when they were idly listening to a sports broadcast that evening by Jimmy Britt, Boston announcer. Ted's explanation was that he had said at the beginning of the season that he wanted to play until he could fix up his mother, financially. That attended to, he enlisted. Simple? It just hadn't occurred to him to talk to anybody about it beforehand.

He may not see military service for days, weeks or even months to come, but at heart he's already a full-fledged Navy man. On the trip down from Boston to New York the other night, the lean likable kid joined a group of soldiers who were riding on the same train. He talked baseball with them for a couple of hours and so overwhelmed them by just being the nice kid he is that one of the soldiers said, "Golly, Ted, it's too bad you signed up in the wrong service. We sure would like you in the Army." Ted hotly defended his choice for the next two hours. Jellicoe couldn't have defended the Navy's role more eloquently.

Cronin Thinks of Hits, and Who'll Get 'Em

Joe Cronin, who is somehow managing to survive the strain of watching his Red Sox blow tough games, isn't thinking right now about what the Sox will do without Williams. "Right now I'm crazy to know what we're going to do about getting a hit when we need it," Joseph moaned after the opening game of the Yankee series. Joe's man Pesky is on the bench. So is Jimmy Foxx, with a recurrence of his sinus trouble. When the time comes for Williams to go, Joe said he'd probably use Pete Fox or Lou Finney in the great hitter's place. Perhaps Will Harridge will let him use both, if Will is approached in a nice way. It would seem only fair.

Only casualty caused by the war thus far, on the Boston team, was the loss of the team's pants and other equipment in the confusion of a troop movement this spring. The Sox were coming up from spring training to meet the Reds in Birmingham. Phil Troy, the club's congenial traveling secretary who has been worrying about such things for 25 years, got up early that morning in Birmingham, walked through the train in his pajamas and a robe, opened the door that looked into the baggage car behind and was horrified to see the baggage car pull away from the rest of the train. It had been hooked on a troop train, without the precaution of removing the equipment of the Sox and the Reds.

Stern Reprimand Greets the Victim

Back in Boston, Troy sheepishly met his friend Yawkey. Mustering his sternest air, Tom inquired with sinister sarcasm the number of years Troy had been a traveling secretary. Phil said he'd hate to compute this eternity. Whereupon Yawkey said, "Well, it must be long enough to keep you from ever being caught flatfooted again."

Money being no deterrent at Boston, Troy went off and made a purchase which is bound to be copied by every club in baseball. He bought 32 flat suitcases, with plywood interiors, and now the Red Sox will tote their uniforms with them—instead of the ago-old custom of shipping them in big trunks in the baggage cars. The suitcases fit under each train berth. The Red Sox are not going to be caught with their monkey suits off, come war or pestilence. Besides (and this is the important thing to Yawkey) it opens up a lot of baggage car space to more essential wartime baggage.

Yawkey believes that baseball should continue but has instructed Troy that he must never permit the Red Sox to interfere in any way with troop movements—even though reservations are made months in advance. "If it'll help, let our players ride in the baggage cars," Tom says.

Cronin has tried everything else. He might try this.

Atlantic City, May 26.—Lighthorse Harry Cooper, who as a 20-year-old upstart lost to the great Walter Hagen in the 1925 P. G. A. semi-finals, slipped in with a six-under-par 138 total today to win medal honors in the twenty-fifth P. G. A. championship here at Seaview Country Club.

Cooper brought out his very best game for the two-day qualifying tests, one which has been absent since his last good year, 1937, and posted consecutive totals of 67 and 71 for the Alex Smith Memorial Trophy.

The 37-year-old English-born professional, now located at Minneapolis, Minn., followed his Monday 67 with a one-under-par 71 today, with 15 pars, 2 birdies and a single bogey. He nabbed a great three on the seventeenth hole to top the 139 totals of Sammy Byrd, ball player-golfer, and Corpl. Mike Turnesa, of Fort Dix, who both tacked 72's to their 67's of yesterday.

Dudley's Putting Off

Schoolboy Safe, on Glove-to-Ear Play

Because an elusive ball (arrow) bounced out of Third Baseman Jimmy Karas' glove in yesterday's Western-Anacostia schoolboy game, the Anacostians' Paul Blaine was safe in the first inning. Blaine later scored the hosts' first run as they upset the defending champions, 2-1

Only a tiny shred of its 1942 championship hopes remained for Western High's baseball team yesterday as the defending interhigh champions, locked in a head-and-head pitchers' battle with Anacostia, were rudely upset by a 2-1 count on the Indians' field.

The loss climaxed a collapse which started with an overtime beating by Tech after three straight triumphs, and left the Raiders with a record of four won and three lost. Wilson and Central remained on top in the race for championship berths, each having lost only once.

In a second public school clash yesterday Tech handed Coolidge, the newcomer to the league, its fifth straight setback, 14-1. The result had little effect on the title play-off.

Leukhahdt Wins

That Anacostia, a rank underdog, was able to down the supposedly invincible Raiders was mostly the doing of big Elmer Leukhardt. The towering right-hander, who has allowed no more than 5 hits in any of his 5 series starts this year, hurled a 2-hitter at Western's sluggers.

Meanwhile, however, Charley Hines was doing almost as well for the losers. Only three safeties were collected off him, one of them a double by Leukhardt. Eventually it was two base hits, bunched by the Indians in the fifth inning, which beat Hines.

Anacostia got its first tally in the opening stanza off exactly no hits. A walk, stolen base and Jimmy Karas' error turned the trick. It wasn't until the fifth inning that the hosts could hit cleanly.

Nats Take Three-Game Winning Streak Into Griffith Stadium's First Night Game

Night baseball at Griffith Stadium makes its 1942 debut tonight with the Nats taking their three-game winning streak into a game with the Boston Red Sox. Play will start at 9 p. m.

Buck Newsom, the Nats' traditional gala game pitcher, will take the mound for the Nats in an effort to gather his fifth victory of the season.

Both contests of the two-game series with the Red Sox are scheduled under the lights with a night game tomorrow night concluding the series.

The Nats, with their three straight triumphs, achieved at the expense of the Yankees and Athletics, have bounded back as a first division threat and are only 2½ games removed from fourth place.

Griffith Stadium's $130,000 lighting system has escaped the wartime dimout regulations because of the city's inland location more than 100 miles from the seacoast, but the stadium can be blacked out in ten seconds in event of an air raid alarm.

Regular prices will prevail for tonight's game, with the box seats and first five rows of the grandstand reserved. More than 20,000 general admission, grandstand and bleacher seats will be available.

Young Bob Savage, S.M.A. Mound Star, Joins Athletics

Philadelphia, May 26.—The A's mound corps was increased to ten yesterday when 20-year-old Bob Savage reported to Manager Mack.

Savage, a 6-foot 2½-inch, 130-pound right-hander, was picked off the campus of Staunton Military Academy in Virginia by Scout Ira Thomas.

Pitching for Staunton in the last three seasons, Savage won 23 and lost 4 games, turning in a 6-to-0 no-hit feat against the University of Virginia frosh this sprng.

Challedon Poor Second To Shut Out

Derby Victor Takes Ballot Handicap at Belmont Easily; Gives Alsab Warning

By the Associated Press

Belmont Park, N. Y., May 26.—Mrs. Payne Whitney's Kentucky Derby winner, Shut Out, served notice here today that Alsab may not have the Belmont Stakes at his mercy when he galloped off with the Ballot Handicap, far in front of three veterans twice his age. The chestnut son of Equipoise, making his first start since finishing fifth in the Preakness, ran the mile and a furlong in 1:48 45, only two-fifths of a second slower than the track record, and led W. L. Bran's 6-year-old Challedon home by a half-dozen lengths.

Louis B. Mayer's Australian star, Reading II, was third, five additional lengths away, while Third Degree, stablemate of Shut Out, was a distant last. The Greentree entry was favorite at 7 to 10.

Today's attendance was 14,712.

Shut Out carried scale weight of 112 pounds. He was conceding Challedon (126), two pounds by the May scale, and giving 10 pounds apiece to his stablemate and Reading II (118). Challedon, whose last start saw him fourth in Whirlaway's Dixie Handicap, and winner of the Philadelphia 'Cap before that, today was second choice to the Greentree pair, closing at $1.25 to $1.

Carried 112 Pounds

Third Degree was hustled into a two lengths lead over Shut Out and Challedon in the first quarter, with Reading II making his second U. S. appearance and showing some improvement, a close fourth. There was little change until the small field rounded out of the backstretch. Midway of the bend, Eddie Arcaro let Shut Out take the lead. After that, it was all Shut Out, a far more dashing colt than he was at Pimlico in the Preakness. The youngster of the party simply toyed with Challedon's stretch bid. Reading II had little contention from Third Degree for the show award.

Challedon, Third Degree and Reading II all are eligible to tackle Whirlaway in Saturday's $30,000 Suburban 'Cap.

Tigers Snap Browns' String, Winning, 3-1

By International News Service

St. Louis, May 26.—Al Benton hurled the Detroit Tigers to a 3-to-1 victory over the St. Louis Browns tonight, letting the Browns down with four hits to halt their four-game winning streak before 4126 fans.

Benton, in notching his second victory of the season against five losses, started the Bengals to victory in the third inning when he doubled, took third on an infield out and scored on Doc Cramer's single.

Eric McNair's home run in the fifth inning proved to be the winning score, although the Tigers counted an unearned run in the seventh.

Hollingsworth's single, two walks and Roy Cullenbine's fly gave the Browns their only tally in the fifth.

Indians Edge Chisox, 2 to 1; Break Streak

By International News Service

Cleveland, May 26.—After eight innings of shutout baseball, the White Sox scored once tonight in the ninth but the Cleveland Indians came back with a pair of tallies to smash a losing streak of five straight, 2-1.

Mel Harder, pitching his first game with the aid of spectacles, and Edgar Smith, the Sox southpaw, locked in a brilliant pitching duel marked by spectacular fielding until the ninth. The Sox scored off Harder when Don Kolloway raced from second to the plate on Bob Kennedy's infield hit.

Ken Keltner led off the Indian ninth by drawing Smith's third walk. He was forced by Jeff Heath but Buster Mills doubled and Lee Fleming singled for two runs and the decision.

A crowd of 7061 watched the game, which was marked by a blackout in the sixth inning.

Early Slams Home Run in Easy Victory

Nats Wipe Out A's One-Run Lead With 14-Hit Attack on Harris and Besse

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

Philadelphia, May 26.—Steve Sundra, forgotten man of the Washington pitching staff, bobbed up as a starting pitcher this afternoon and did a job on the Athletics that extended the Nats' winning streak to three straight. The score was 8 to 3, and Sundra had excellent cooperation from the Washington batting order.

Every man in the Nats' line-up partook of a 14-hit assault on the pitching of Luman Harris, a right-hander, and Herman Besse, a left-hander, who looked very much alike to Bucky Harris' suddenly inspired gang. Jake Early took the opportunity to bang out his first home run of the season.

Sundra wasn't exactly a complete puzzle to the A's, allowing 11 hits, but he held them at bay with one run until the Nats piled up a 6-to-1 lead in the first six innings. He walked only two batters and was never in serious trouble.

Nats Tie Score

Mickey Vernon and Bob Repass teamed up nicely to fetch a run that tied the score for the Nats at 1-1 in the second inning. Vernon dropped a hit into short right center and when it bounced off the knee of the onrushing Valo, Vernon beat it out for a double. With two out Repass banged a single to left that got the run home.

Jimmy Pofahl instituted some two-run proceedings against Harris in the third inning and the Nats moved in front, 3-1. Pofahl slugged a double to left center, but when Sundra's attempted sacrifice wiped out Pofahl at third base, the innards seemed to go out of the Nats' scoring chances. However, Sundra was waved to second on a balk and with two out, Spence singled to center to score him. Chartak walked, and Campbell got a Texas Leaguer single to center for the second run of the inning.

Early Homers

Early inaugurated more trouble for Harris in the sixth when he boomed his first home run of the season over the right field fence with one out and the bases empty. It was the first of four Washington hits in the inning. Repass beat out a bounder to shortstop, and on Pofahl's sacrifice bunt, Third Baseman Blair chucked the ball against the right field boxes. Repass scored and Pofahl reached third on the error. Pofahl got home when Sundra's grounder took a freak hop over Suder's head for a cheap hit.

Sundra meanwhile was doing very well in his second start of the season. He gave up a run in the first inning when he walked the first man to face him, but he didn't give up another until the sixth when the A's bunched three hits with two out. In that session, Miles, Valo and Siebert bashed out consecutive singles.

The Nats' infield got Sundra over the hump in the seventh inning, when Wallaesa's safe bunt and Kreevich's single put two on with

Lee Savold Gets $2220, Nova $3861

Savold Heralded as Only Contender for Louis; Nova Praised For Gallant Battle

The Navy Relief Society received $5315.20, approximately one-fifth of the gross gate of $26,061, from the boxing show Monday night at Griffith Stadium. Lou Nova, who was licked by Lee Savold in the 10-round main event, received about $3861, or 17½ per cent of the net, which was $22,067. Savold's end was $2220.

The fight show was a success artistically, but there is no doubt that it failed in the financial department, especially in providing for Navy Relief.

For Savold it was a big boost toward a shot at Heavyweight Champion Joe Louis. For Nova it probably was the death knell for his hopes of becoming a heavyweight contender.

The scrap was an unusually good one. Nova was handicapped by those multiple cuts, but that is the fight game. The Post score card had Savold on top at the time the contest was stopped in the eighth round.

One thing that hasn't been elaborated on in that main go was the fast pace set by Savold. He bewildered Nova with his speed. The Iowan fooled his critics and Nova when he kept going at a break-neck pace throughout. In comparison to the 10-round semiwindup between Steve Mamakos and George Abrams, which was considered fast, the heavyweight scrap was a few beats ahead of it.

Promoter Mike Jacobs didn't make a definite announcement the other night about his plans for a championship fight. With Louis in the Army, Jacobs' plans are on a day-to-day basis. It's not a closed secret that Uncle Mike was surprised when Savold won. Even more so, than Nova.

But, with Billy Conn on the shelf, Melio Bettina going into the Army next month, and Pastor's luster tainted by that draw with Tami Mauriello, Savold remains the only logical contender to meet Louis. If there is a heavyweight championship fight this summer, Savold's managers, Bill Daly and Hymie Wiseman, can't see how any fighter but their own will meet Louis. And they can't see that fight anywhere but in Washington.

his precious strokes to finish with what he called "one of my worst rounds of golf."

The jinx was on the former champions, in fact playing partners and respective four and two-time titlists, Walter Hagen and Leo Diegel, finished way out with hacking totals of 156 and 155 for the two rounds but even more surprising was the failure of Johnny Revolta and Paul Runyan. Revolta went up to 77 today for 150 while Runyan is probably still kicking himself for his missing out. The two-time champ missed a 2-foot putt on the eighteenth hole for a birdie and 146 and then shamed himself on the first role of the playoff with a horrible six.

Two-round totals of 147, three over par, tied for the last match play berths and eight pros played off for five places. Sam Parks, jr., the former Open Champ; Joe Kirkwood, trick-shot artist; Jimmy Hines, the prominent New Yorker; Vic Bass, of Iowa and Texan Jim Gauntt parred the first hole and won the places while Western Open Champ Herman Barron and Tom Mahan took fives and Runyan a big six, missing every shot.

The other surprising nonqualifiers were Horton Smith, of the perfect putting fame; Ralph Guldahl, still in his two-year slump; Corpl. Ed Oliver, whose golf showed the effect of a layoff, and both halves of the Miami four-ball championship team, Chandler Harper and Herman Keyser.

For a while they were counting Sammy Snead out. On the border line with a 73 on Monday, Sam played the first eight holes today in two over par and when he again bogied the easy eighth you could have toasted a piece of bread on his neck and burned it black.

The Virginia walloper socked a pair of ponderous woods in the nnth for a birdie four, and still plenty mad, birdied three of the first seven holes on the tougher pines back nine and coasted in with a 144. Snead, who almost broke his putter for a second time today, threw it in the bag as he walked off the eighteenth green and muttered, "Now let me at one of those big shots tomorrow."

Denny Shute, twice winner, once finalist and always a threat in this championship, toughest of all to win, finished nicely to gain a place after he, too, was in the danger zone. Playing without a single follower despite his fame, Denny finished with 71-74 and on the eve of the 36-hole matches must be watched.

The outgoing bay nine, continually swept by a treacherous breeze off the bordering bay and the back pines nine, bordered by tall pines and dotted with yawning traps, took its toll of the Maryland and Virginia delegation and counted all five out of the match-play rounds.

Harper lost his chance for the playoff when he trapped his tee shot on the par 3 seventeenth, graveyard of many a hope today, and took four. Ernie Ball, the Charlottesville pro, again today ran into a successive 5-6 on par 4 holes of the back nine and finished with 150, three shots too high for the playoff. Jack Isaacs, the Middle Atlantic P. G. A. champion, was also 150, improved with a 74, while Rut Coffey lost his chances with an outgoing 40 and totaled 151, followed by Soldier Hugh McClellan with 156.

Benny Loving, the quiet-spoken Richmond, Va.-born pro and assistant to Wiffy Cox several years ago at Congressional, qualified with a 145. Loving, now pro at Longmeadow, Mass., was only one over par for the two rounds and wasted three shots on the seventeenth, five Monday and four today. Benny, winner of nearly $2000 on only a portion of the winter tour, is hitting the ball well and may spring an upset or two.

The two smooth-stroking Sams, Byrd and Snead, meet in what looks to be the first round feature tomorrow morning while Ghezzi will have his work cut out from the very start in opposing Jimmy Demaret, the flashy dresser and sometimes flashy golfer. Medalist Cooper starts against Mike Turnesa while Lloyd Mangrum, lowest scorer today with a 68, meets Dick Metz. Benny Loving has a chance to be a hero right off the bat when he meets Ben Hogan, the big money winner who would like to win hs first tournament before the war stops them all.

N. Y. U. Track Squad Sets World Record

By the Associated Press

New York, May 26.—New York University's distance medley relay team shattered the world record for that event today by romping the mile and seven-eighths in 7:18.8. The old mark of 7:25.4 was set by a New York Athletic Club foursome in September, 1925.

Leslie MacMitchell, famous Violet miler, did his stint in 4:16.6 and Bill Hulse clipped off his half mile chore in 1:50.7. Frank Carter contributed a 0:49.8 quarter mile and Dave Lawyer a 0:21.7 furlong.

The race was held on the Columbia University track in place of the usual Tuesday drill, Fordham finishing second by 135 yards. Manhattan College was third.

A New York University quartet, with MacMitchell running anchor, established the present indoor record of 7:25.3 on February 22, 1941.

Central Beats G. W. High, 9-4; Chiporas Star

Outfielder Pete Chiporas slugged two home runs yesterday to lead Central's nine to a 9 to 4 triumph over George Washington High on the Alexandria lot.

Chiporas' hit came with nobody on base in the fifth and with a mate on in the ninth.

Aaron Weisenberg and Harry Wolfe split a five hit pitching assignment for the winners while the Vikings were collecting 7 off three President hurlers.

Today the Vikings go up against an alumni team at Central Stadium at 1 p. m. The game will be interrupted after each three innings for the running of the school's annual boys and girls track meet.

Feller Will Face Paige Here Sunday as Stars Meet Monarchs

Star Colored Pitcher to Seek Second Victory Over All-Stars; Game at Stadium

Although he was denied an opportunity to hurl against the Kansas City Monarchs in Chicago last Sunday, Bob Feller, former Cleveland Indians pitching ace, will be on the mound against the Homestead Grays, with Satchel Paige twirling Sanday afternoon at Griffith Stadium.

In a telegram to Cum Posey, owner of the Grays, yesterday, Feller stated that he would be able to keep the date. The former Cleveland star and one of the leading hurlers in the American League last season is now at the Naval Station at Newport, R. I.

Meanwhile, Paige, hailed as the greatest pitcher in Negro baseball, is still boasting over his 3-1 victory over the All-Stars in the Windy City and vowing as to how he will make it victory No. 2 at the local ballyard on Sunday. The 33-year-old, 6-foot, 3-inch hurler, who has been tossing 'em plateward for 17 years, declared:

"I was born with control and my fast one was working wonders for me against the All-Stars. It'll be doing the same in Washington on Sunday. This time I'll shut 'em out."

Also in the All-Star line-up will be Cecil Travis, former Washington Senator shortstop, who is now in the Army.

Atley Donald Hurls Six-Hitter at Sox; Ted Williams Clouts His 12th Home Run

By the Associated Press

New York, May 26.—The New York Yankees raided three pitchers for 13 hits, including three home runs, to overwhelm the Boston Red Sox, 9 to 2, today behind the six-hit hurling of Atley Donald.

The slender right-hander kept the Red Sockers suppressed except for the third inning when Pete Fox singled and Long Ted Williams smashed this twelfth home run of the season deep into the assembly of 600 soldiers and sailors in the right-field stands at Yankee Stadium.

Even this tremendous blow was an anticlimax, however, for the World Champions already had provided the more than 11,000 customers with a show in the first inning.

Little Frankie Crosetti led off with a walk and coasted across the plate on a towering home run by Tom Henrich, his third of the year. Then Joe DiMaggio singled and Charley Keller, who had been in a hitting slump, followed with a line drive into Boston's bull pen next to the bleachers in right center. It was his fourth homer.

All of these blows were at the expense of Joe Dobson, who gave way to Lefty Ken Chase at the start of the second. The southpaw was tagged for two runs in the third when Charley Keller singled, went to second on an infield out, and scored on a single to right by Bill Dickey, who promptly raced all the way home on Phil Rizzuto's single to deep left.

Crosetti led off the fourth with a single. He was forced by Henrich, but with two out Joe DiMaggio dropped a high fly in the right-field corner for a triple, scoring Henrich, and a single by Joe Gordon brought home DiMaggio.

one out. Jimmy Pofahl made a scintillating grab of Sunder's smash toward second base and flipped it to Repass, who whipped the ball to Vernon for an inning-ending double play.

Sundra breezed in thereafter.

The Nats got a couple of precautionary runs off Herman Besse in the ninth. The big left-hander, who had relieved Harris in the seventh inning, walked Estalella and then ran into a double by Chartak, which scored Estalella all the way from first, and a single by Campbell that got Chartak home.

The only reason Bruce Campbell didn't have three hits for the day was because Mike Kreevich grabbed his seventh-inning drive with one hand near the left center wall . . . Mike Chartak has been giving the Nats their best right fielding job in recent memory, with his throwing arm, a dire threat to base runners . . . Jimmy Pofahl played like the world's greatest shortstop throughout the afternoon . . . Braves Slug Melton, Beat Giants, 4-2

By the Associated Press

Boston, May 26.—Still holding determinedly to second place in the National League, the Boston Braves pounced on an old nemesis, Lefty Cliff Melton, for three runs in the first two innings today and went on to beat the New York Giants 4 to 2.

Al Javery pitched six-hit ball for the Braves and in spite of three errors by his teammates retained control of the situation except in the third inning, when a wild throw by Third Baseman Nanny Fernandez let Bill Jurges go all the way to second to open the inning. Dave Koslo, rookie relief pitcher, then doubled to left, Judges holding up at third, and Nick Witek doubled both runners home.

Melton beat Boston three times without a defeat last year and had stopped the Braves twice this season. But today they broke the spell.

With two out in the first inning Eddie Miller singled, Fernandez walked, Miller stole third, and then Miller and Fernandez worked a perfect double steal to score a run.

Chet Ross opened the second stanza with his second homer of the season and after two were out, Johnny Cooney singled, Max West walked and Miller singled to center scoring Cooney.

Boston's other run came off Koslo in the fifth on singles by Clyde Kluttz, Frank Demaree and Sebby Sisti.

Bobby Doerr Credits Changed Stance for Improvement at Bat

One of Year's Biggest Surprises, He Leads Hitters in American

By the Associated Press

New York, May 26.—The all-around play of Robert Pershing Doerr at bat and at second base for the Boston Red Sox has been one of the striking chapters of the new baseball season.

Up till yesterday he had been hitting over .400 and had been fielding better than at any time in his career—which is a lot to say for the only current second baseman who rivals Joe Gordon of the New York Yankees.

Doerr credits a different batting stance for his spectacular performances in recent weeks.

"I guess I have been hot," he said today. "It takes a lot of luck to get the hits I've been getting, but I think it has helped for me to take a more open stance. This year I am facing the pitcher more and I think it gives a little better view of the ball than standing sidewise.

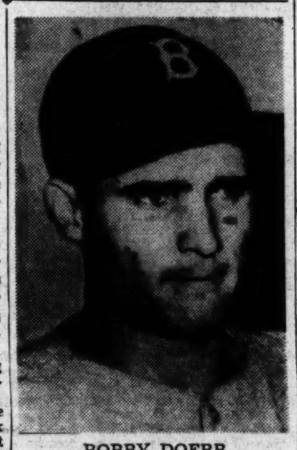
"Manager Cronin likes that sort of a stance and it has done all right for me this year. I did a lot of experimenting last season and I think that is the big reason I didn't have a good year.

"I had trouble with my back this spring and missed about five games, but it seems all right (business of knocking on his head) and I guess whenever a fellow is hitting well he feels good and does everything a little better than he would otherwise."

Bobby, 24, now is in his sixth season with the Red Sockers. In 1938 he batted .318 and the following year hit 22 home runs and batted in 105 runs, although his average fell to .291. His efforts last year amounted to 16 homers, 93 runs batted in and a .282 percentage.

His teammates don't expect him to lead the league in hitting this year, appraising him frankly as a .320 hitter at his best form over the full season.

Doerr says simply that "the season has just started and I've been hot." He also has been in Fenway Park at Boston a lot and he likes it there. "It's a mental attitude, partly. That fence is kind to right-handers. Here in Yankee Stadium the field is so big every hit has got to be the real thing to count."



BOBBY DOERR

Bob has not given up trying for the long ball in order to get more base hits.

"I just try to meet the ball," he contended. But to date he has made five homers and batted in 34 runs to make himself so valuable that temporarily, at least, he has taken over the clean-up spot in Boston's batting order.

Landon Midgets Beat Friends; Craft Hurls

Cardinals Win In Tenth, 3-1, Over Chicubs

By the Associated Press

Chicago, May 26.—The Chicago Cubs momentarily snatched a hard-earned victory away from the Cardinals today, but the Red Birds scored two runs in the tenth inning to break up a 1-to-1 tie and defeat the Chicago teams, 3 to 1, to sweep the two-game series.

Neither side had scored during a pitchers' duel between Max Lanier and Vern Olsen until the eighth inning when Terry Moore blasted his second homer of the season into the left field bleachers.

Olsen, making his first start of the season since breaking two fingers on his pitching hand during spring training, weakened in the tenth and the Cardinals counted two more runs on as may hits and three walks to win the game.

Howard Krist finished up for the Cardinals and stopped a Cub threat in the last of the tenth.

Twilight Ball Will Be Tried In Brooklyn

By the Associated Press

Brooklyn, May 26.—Larry MacPhail, the man who pioneered night baseball into a gold mine for major league clubs, is ready to give twilight ball a trial now that the Army has turned out the lights at Ebbets Field.

After watching the league leading Dodgers and the last place Phils play before 9572 fans in the twilight yesterday, Brooklyn's head man said today he's convinced there is a place for occasional games starting in the early evening.

"Yesterday's crowd was just about what I expected," said MacPhail. "It was less than we would have drawn had the game been played at night and more than if we had played it in the afternoon.

To Decide June 10

"We'll probably not make a definite decision until around June 10, but I believe twilight games might be the answer to the blackout of night ball in New York. Yesterday's date was the worst possible for a twilight test. We had played to over 85,000 in that Giant series at the Polo Grounds over the wekend and a lot of those people came from Flatbush. There was bound to be a Monday reaction.

MacPhail said he was not considering playing all of the Dodgers' originally scheduled night games at twilight, but probably would spot a few of the leading clubs in contests starting at 6 p. m., or even later.

By later, the Brooklyn redhead said he meant as late at 7 or 7:15 p. m. and indicated he might give that hour a trial when the Cubs tangle with the Dodgers, June 15.

Would Need Lights

"The sun will go down about 8:30 that date, or 20 minutes later than last night," explained MacPhail. "Of course, we couldn't get in nine innings in that time, but we might ask the league and civilian defense authorities for permission to turn on the lights until about 9:15."

Major league rules forbid turning on of lights for day games.

MacPhail said that, even now, the reflective glow from Ebbets Field's lights is not visible at sea until long after 9:30.

"And that will be true till a later hour in June or July."

Yesterday's test was the first in recent years for twilight ball in the majors in which there was not a charity angle. The Braves tried it during the first World War, but after one game gave up the idea. The Dodgers and Giants played before more than 40,000 in their armed services fund earlier in the season, but it started at 4:45 p. m.

A 6:30 p. m., Eastern War Time, game in St. Louis yesterday, between the Browns and Tigers, drew 8496 and the Indians-White Sox contest in Cleveland, starting at 4:30 p. m., 7959. Both were staged for the Army and Navy Relief Funds.

Navy Host to Army Sports Teams Today

Middies End One of Best Seasons With Track And Baseball; Other Teams Invade West Point

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Md., May 26.—Navy's spring sports squads, already assured one of the best all-time Naval Academy seasonal records, ring down the curtain on their 1942 schedules tomorrow, meeting the perennial foe—Army.

While only two competitions are scheduled here, the comparative season's records practically assure Annapolis a double-barreled feature in the staging of the baseball game and track meet.

Traveling to West Point, Navy's once-beaten lacrossemen, its undefeated tennis team and impressive linksmen are scheduled to oppose the Greylegs in their own bailiwick.

However, Army's nine, loser of only five contests in 15, crosses bats with a Navy team very likely to rebound from last Saturday's defeat at Georgetown's hands. The Hoyas' 10-to-2 triumph snapped a Middie victory streak of 10 games and, coming directly before the Army clash, doesn't figure to set well with Navy's diamond hands.

In track, Navy's sprinters, licked but once this year, meet an Army cinder combine that has lost only one dual skirmish in two years and has run roughshot over all 1942 foemen.

Tomorrow's track feature, moved up from June 6, to enable both service squads to climax their campaigns in the roundup at New York Friday and Saturday, starts at 3:30 p. m., an hour after the baseball contest begns.

Reds' F. McCormick Has Back Injury

Cincinnati, May 26 (AP).—When the Cincinnati Reds left today for Chicago, First Baseman Frank McCormick remained behind at Christ Hospital for treatment of a back injury.

McCormick, second in the National League in home runs and runs batted in, missed last night's game, breaking a chain of 652 consecutive games started in 1938.

It was uncertain whether McCormick, suffering from a pulled back muscle, would be ready for action when the Redlegs return for double-headers Saturday and Sunday.

Rookie Hank Sauer, up from Birmingham where he hit .330 last season, will be on first base for the Reds tomorrow when a three-game series with the Cubs opens.

Whitehead Released, Browns Down to 25

St. Louis, May 26 (AP).—Releasing Pitcher Johnny Whitehead to San Antonio, the St. Louis Browns cut their squad to 24 players today, one under the 25 limit. Whitehead, a veteran, has been back and forth between the Browns and the minors since he was acquired from the Chicago White Sox in a trade in 1939.

Michigan Sun Scores in Hancock Purse at Charles Town

Spectator Beaten Out In Stretch

Sampler Runs Third In Feature; Winner Pays $4.20 Ticket With Claggett Up

By Walter Haight
a Staff Correspondent

Charles Town, W. Va., May 26.—R. C. Waple's Michigan Sun, beaten off on heavy oval in his previous start, found a drying-out racing strip to his liking and won the Hancock Purse, featuring this afternoon's sport. Although credited with only a length advantage at the end, Michigan Sun was under restraint and could have made it five had Jockey Herb Claggett so desired.

G. D. McCleary's Spectator was second, a length in front of Mrs. E. D. Sower's Sampler, at the close of the 7-furlong battle. Only three others competed, and Michigan Sun turned in time of 1:30 3/5. A stand-out in the past performance sheets, Michigan Sun paid $4.20 in the favorite's role.

Spectator, Sampler and Nassau's Beau ran as a team in front for half the distance, while Claggett was content to be in fifth position with a strong grip on the public choice. Approaching the far turn, Claggett asked Michigan Sun for speed and the 3-year-old colt responded on the outside.

In the stretch run, Spectator shook off his rivals and opened a good lead. However, Claggett brought Michigan Sun along and the colt wore down the leader to be opening a gap at the end while not being allowed to extend himself.

The program opened with another victory for the combination of Jockey Martin Bletzacker and Owner-Trainer M. B. Goss. Shanty Boat proved the best of the juveniles gathered for the 4½-furlong sprint and romped home 2½ lengths in front of the favored Lady Tennie with Some Where third. The winner paid $28.80.

A favorite and a longshot figured in a $117.60 pay-off on the daily double. Silver Beam, paying $5, started the twin bet rolling and Gay Troubador, at $25.80, put the finishing touches on the transaction.

Selections at Charles Town

Dear Al:

Trainer Danny Shea, who has been successful here, has turned this division of his stable over to Belmont Evans and will go to Delaware Park to handle horses owned by his wife. Glad to hear that Pete Marshall is back at work on the Washington end of the telegraph wire which takes my stuff from the track. He has been ill. Apprentice W. Richmond made his saddle debut here yesterday. He is under contract to S. B. Webb, Black Bass, the favorite in last Saturday's sixth race, grabbed herself coming out of the gate and will be on the shelf for a while. Well Aware, half sister to Attention, who recently foaled a colt by Dauber, has been sent to the court of A. G. Vanderbilt's Discovery. Well Aware is one of the five mares in the modest breeding establishment owned by President Albert J. Boyle, of the Charles Town Jockey Club. Trainer-owner E. K. Auld says his father is still critically ill. Horsemen continue to rally to the colors of the fighting forces. Alex Curley has enlisted in the Marines and leaves for Parris Island, S. C., today. Mrs. H. Lacoste has purchased Charmful and Sir Time. Looks as if we may get some work for the new sprinkler real soon. Starter John Morrissey has been doing a fine job. Starters never get credit for the good ones but generally take a booing when they make a mistake. Shanty Boat, winner of yesterday's first race, is out of the mare Bungalow, who used to do a lot of running around the smaller Maryland tracks. Looks as if she inherited a lot of speed. Her daddy is Slave Ship. Don't forget the 18-day meeting here with all profits going to Army and Navy relief and West Virginia charities. The meeting starts June 15 and ends July 4. See you on the rail.

BILL.

First race—SAINT PYREWICK seems the best suited of those gathered for the first event. Needs only the right handling. HAPPY HOSTESS is better than recent races. TERRY MAY and NO FAIR are possibilities.

Second race—REAL BOY did everything asked last out and appears ready to make it two in a row. SHOWABAL has speed and belongs close with these. FIRST FLING to take care of the others.

Third race—MARANDAN has all the earmarks of a winning favorite in this field. Needs only a share of the racing luck. PYMO was rushed off his feet last out. With a rated ride this one will be dangerous. ANN GROUCHER to show.

Fourth race—OF COURSE has speed and seems ideally placed in this company. The route suits. ARQUERO is better than generally rated. MEADOW GOLD for the minor money.

Fifth race—PETE'S GOLD could be the right one in this rather open affair. Likes this route and I'm going to take my chances. MATHORA will be a threat on a fast track. ROLLS ROUGH for the show end, and all of it if the mud comes up.

Sixth race—HIGHLAND SONG, HALF INCH and BUTTERMAN are a close fit in this field. I'm going to take them in the order named.

Seventh race—BRAZEN HUZZY has the inside post here and should make the most of it. Needs only a share of the racing luck. DON ORLAN is good now. MODRED is a possibility on a fast oval.

Eighth race—FRED'S FIRST has closing ability and should be in time to take it all. BLENENTHEL begins to figure with this kind. PETEE LAD is getting ready to score.

Ninth race—ALAMODE gets my call in the day's finale. Should down these cheap ones. SIR TIME awoke last out and is a threat. PURPLE DAWN for the minor money.

Best bet—REAL BOY.

Gonzaga Nine Chokes Off Late Eastern Rally to Win; 5 to 4

Winners Get 17 Safeties Off 2 Hurlers

Billy Carroll Tosses 7-Hitter for Purple; Elmer Raba's 4 Hits Lead Victors' Attack

Throttling an Eastern High rally in the final inning, Gonzaga's baseball forces captured their twelfth triumph in 16 starts yesterday, a 5-4 margin on the White Tide's diamond.

The winners shelled two Eastern pitchers for 17 safeties, while Billy Carroll hurled a seven-hitter, but finally needed a pair of tallies in the sixth to win. Leading the heavy assault of Gonzaga was Elmer Raba, outfielder and pitcher, who notched four singles in five trips.

Friday the Purple closes its season against Bethesda-Chevy Chase on the suburban field.

Covering an airline distance of 400 miles, the winner was closely pressed by General MacArthur, from the loft of W. R. Pennington.

One hundred and sixty-seven birds from 25 local lofts competed in the race.

North Carolina Honors 4 Washington Boys

Special Dispatch to The Post

Chapel Hill, N. C., May 26.—Four Washington (D. C.) boys have received awards from the University of North Carolina athletic council.

Dick Hollander and Tom Wadden got varsity monograms for track and tennis, respectively, while freshman numerals went to R. N. Davis for track and F. J. Wideman for baseball.

Terps Compile Poor Record In Varied Spring Athletics

Maryland Lacrosse Squad Boasts Best Mark Of Season; Baseballers Win but 9 Games

University of Maryland spring sports teams in lacrosse, baseball, track and lacrosse compiled the unusually bad record of 17 won, 22 lost, 2 tied.

As usual, the lacrosse team led the others by winning seven of ten matches. The tennis team won four, lost two, deadlocked one. The baseball nine won only 5 of 18 starts, and the trackmen took one meet, lost four, tied one. The lacrossemen set a national season scoring record of 108 goals.

The baseball team was consigned to a difficult season as early as the first two weeks when the Terps opened up with an invasion of Dixie that netted six straight losses.

Compensating somewhat for the failure of the varsity teams was the good collective record of the freshmen, topped by the baseball team which was undefeated in four games. Its schedule was curtailed by rain and cancellations owing to transportation problems.

Mearle DuVall and Jim (Pop) Wharton, both of Baltimore, are the only three-letter athletes listed for graduation Saturday. Both earned their M's in football, basketball and baseball. They also will receive R. O. T. C. commissions and will be in the Army shortly.

All of Maryland's 80 football aspirants will be in action Saturday when Clark Shaughnessy, new Terp coach, gives students, commencement week visitors and the public at large a look at his T-formation. Hostilities will open at 2:30 with a game between the third and fourth teams. At 3:30 the leading two squads will give another demonstration.

third on Bob Parrott's single, his stolen base and two straight passed balls by Catcher Bob Nolte. Then with one out, Red Sullivan drove a solid single to center, Moe Collins sacrificed, and Charley Kuhl repeated Sullivan's effort to score the winning run.

Though he tossed hitless ball from the third inning on, Leukhardt had considerable more trouble than Hines in the late frames. In the sixth Western put a man on second on an error with one out, but couldn't drive another ball out of the infield. In the seventh another Raider got to second the same way, but died as three mates grounded to first base. And in the eighth Raiders were on second and third when Leukhardt fanned Jim Malarkey to retire the side.

Coolidge made a contest of its meeting with Tech for three innings, but that was all. The Trainers rushed over three runs in the fourth and added to their total in each subsequent inning.

Dan O'Connel, Tech fire-baller, took credit for a 2-hit pitching job as his mates slapped two Colt hurlers for 15 hits. Fifteen strikeouts augmented O'Connell's excellent work.

Papa Bear Halas Is Planning For Bigger and Better Bruins

Chicago Pro GridBoss Predicts Fine Season For National League

By the Associated Press

Chicago, May 26.—The papa bear, contrary to usual habits, has not been in hibernation.

George Halas, master of the Chicago Bears, champions of the National Football League, has spent the past five months working out plans to—of all things—create a greater Bears team.

"This ought to be a great season for the National League," Halas said today. "We've received every possible encouragement from the Army and Navy and on that basis we're going right ahead planning for next season.

"But, if the situation becomes such that we shouldn't continue, and the Government wants us to call a halt, we'll be ready to stop instantly."

Many Bears in Service

Halas said the Bears have turned over a lot of players to "something more important—winning the war," but added that there are a lot of Bears left, and some new ones on the way.

The armed forces have taken, or soon will take, Al Baisi, Norm Standlee, Ken Kavanaugh, Bob Swisher, George McAfee, Joe Maniaci, Al Forte, Dick Plasman and Joe Mihal—about 33 per cent of the team.

"Yet, we will have a good ball club," Halas said. "Particularly we'll have a better line. And we'll be pretty well fixed in the backfield. Of course we won't have McAfee and Standlee, but we can start off with Sid Luckman, Ray McLean, Bill Osmanski and Hugh Gallarneau.

Certain of Four Men

"If we can get one man extra for each of those four positions we'll be all set. And I'm pretty certain who those four men will be, but I cannot say now."

As for the rest of the league, Halas is concerned more with the Western division where the Green Bay Packers are perennially his biggest worry and the Chicago Cardinals the next best jinx.

GEORGE HALAS

"You've heard, I suppose, that the Packers have lost 15 men," he said. "Well, they won't be without a single one of their four key men—Cecil Isbell, Don Hutson, Larry Craig and Baby Ray. That business of the 15 men doesn't mean a thing."

Has the T formation been milked dry? "Not at all," says Halas, the T's greatest exponent. "We've got some swell new ideas for next season. Wait'll you see them in action."

Chestertown Girl Wins Hood's White Blazer

Marion Grieb Takes College's Highest Honor in Athletics

Special Dispatch to The Post

Frederick, Md., May 26.—Marion Greb of Chestertown, Md., received the white blazer, the highest award made by the athletic association of Hood College, at its annual banquet held in Coblentz Hall.

The white blazer, with an unmounted "H," is awarded each year to a member of the incoming senior class, elected by the student body, who excels in scholarshi, leadership and sportsmanship. Miss Greb, who was recently elected president of the athletic association, received the silver riding cup at the annual horse show on May Day, May 9, for her proficiency in riding.

The banquet, which climaxed the spring sports day program, was presided over by Jane Simon of Abington, Pa., retiring president of the athletic association. Miss Simon announced that the freshman class, having reached the "oomph" stage, were the winners of the physical fitness contest which has been running for the past eight weeks, and the juniors, in the "ambitious" class, were the runners-up. Marilyn Hayes, a freshman from Irwin, Pa., was the only participant in the program to achieve a perfect score, which was based on eight hours of sleep, three meals a day, one hours' exercise and good morale.

Coveted cups, "H's," bars and membership on honorary teams, were announced and presented by Miss Simon.

High lights of the spring sports day program, which included students and faculty competing in a wide variety of sports, were the tennis singles finals, won by Marilyn Barnett of New Orleans, La.; the tennis doubles finals, won by Miss Barnett and Mary Louise Bruneau, Brooklyn, N. Y., and the fencing championship bouts, won by Emma Vonderheide of Baltimore.

Miss Grieb was general chairman for the day.

Wishful thinking won't keep America's vitally necessary 5,000,000 motor trucks in service for the duration

It's not enough to keep your truck will last... it's your patriotic duty to make it last till Victory Day

P.M. White P.C.
Preventive Maintenance Parts Conservation

A COOPERATIVE PLAN of Truck Conservation

To prolong the life of every existing truck... and to conserve on replacement parts because of the critical materials they contain... is the patriotic duty of American truck owners.

Ordinary maintenance methods are not enough to meet the situation. That's why White has devised the Cooperative Plan of Truck Conservation.

Two features make the Plan unique—Preventive Maintenance combined with Parts Conservation. One without the other is a half-way measure. White offers the protection of both.

It's your patriotic duty to make your truck last longer and conserve critical materials, but it's ours, too, to provide the way to do it.

Whether you operate one truck or a fleet, you ought to get the facts today about the White Cooperative Plan of Truck Conservation. A booklet describing the Plan in detail is available upon request.

P.M. Preventive Maintenance

PREVENTIVE MAINTENANCE prevents excessive wear on parts; postpones major repairs and avoids the premature need for new replacement parts. It insures against excessive time out of service and thus increases a truck's productive capacity. It conserves gasoline by keeping the truck operating at peak efficiency at all times. It prolongs tire life.

MODERN EQUIPMENT—enables White Service Men to render a superior type of lubrication, reducing to a minimum the rate of wear on parts and, thus, saving critical metals. Regular lubrication is an important step in the White P. M. Program.

ENGINE TUNE-UP—This scientific instrument is typical of modern White Service equipment. It is an Engine Analyzer which gives a positive analysis of the operating condition of the engine, eliminating costly guess-work.

Preventive Maintenance is the "stitch in time" Service Plan which White originated 10 years ago and has constantly improved with the development of new shop equipment, special repair machines and time-saving methods. Our mechanics have had years of experience with Preventive Maintenance—it's not a wartime expedient with them.

MANY WHITE TRUCKS, with more than a million miles of service to their credit, have been protected by P. M. since its start. It stands to reason that when your truck receives proper lubrication, regular inspections, adjustments, and prompt minor repairs—before big, expensive troubles can develop—truck life is greatly extended and the rate of wear on vital parts containing critical war materials is greatly reduced.

Preventive Maintenance is available to owners of all makes of trucks.

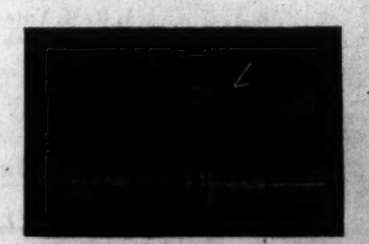
P.C. Parts Conservation

PARTS CONSERVATION is a new, exclusive White Service development especially designed to meet the present situation. It is made possible by the fact that modern White Service Stations are "miniature White factories"—with special machines that enable skilled White craftsmen to repair worn or broken parts that, in ordinary times, would be replaced by new parts. In order to conserve critical war materials—and protect owners "for the duration"—all repairable parts will be repaired.

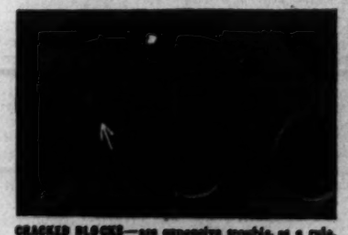
When a new part is required, it may be obtained only in exchange for the old one it replaces.

This policy applies to virtually all replacement parts from spark plugs to rear axles. It has been adopted first-in-the-industry by White, voluntarily, to conserve war materials and to extend the length of time owners can be sure of getting needed truck parts.

If the old part is repairable, it will be returned to the original owner at the cost of repair. If it is not repairable, a credit will be allowed, based on the scrap value of the old part, if it has value. All parts which are not repairable will be disposed of in accordance with the recommended plan of the Salvage Section of the War Production Board.



SHEARED "PROP" SHAFT—By means of White's perfected technique, even a splice, where perfect alignment is so essential, can be satisfactorily welded in the original propeller shaft.



CRACKED BLOCKS—are expensive trouble, as a rule, but your White Service Station has the equipment to repair them and, in many cases, reclaim the original block, as these "before and after" photos show.

Inflation Called A 'False Specter' By Alvord; Parley Also Hears Delano

By Malcolm G. Douglas
Post Staff Writer

Responsibility of raising the billions of dollars necessary to carry America to victory in the war effort was placed on the shoulders of American bankers yesterday by speakers at the second day meeting of the convention of the District of Columbia Bankers Association, at Columbia Country Club.

MR. ALVORD

Those who handed the burden to the bankers were Preston Delano, Comptroller of the Currency, and Ellsworth C. Alvord, chairman, committee on Federal finance, United States Chamber of Commerce, and trustee of the Tax Foundation. Others who spoke were Constantine Brown, foreign news analyst, and D. J. Needham, general counsel, American Bankers Association.

Introduced by Association Vice President John Reilly, who presided, Mr. Delano spoke briefly, saying he had just returned from the New York bankers' convention, and he was convinced the bankers "are going to do the job and see it through."

Deposit Jump Seen

Within the next year, he continued, banks will see a decided increase in deposits, and he suggested that they adopt a prudent and conservative dividend policy. The United States is looking to Washington and Washington bankers, he added, to take the lead in financing the war and he felt assured they would do the job.

Addressing the session on "Taxation," Mr. Alvord said that during the next fiscal year beginning July 1, 73 billion dollars will be expended, less Social Security taxes, and all but six billion dollars will go for prosecuting the war. This leaves 56 billion dollars to be financed, he stated, and this could be done in three ways: by revenues from taxation, borrowing from banks, or the issuance of paper.

He urged the bankers set their objectives and work toward (1) maximum production of war; (2) maximum control over inflation; (3) maximum production of revenues; (4) maximum of protection against profiteering; and (5) maximum preparation for peace. Alvord said it was up to the bankers to decide what tax burden can be borne without affecting the maximum production for war.

The speaker warned at this point that the "flag of inflation now being waved is apt to be a false flag." The specter of inflation is not to be feared so much at this time, he added, as in the postwar budget. He predicted that normal expenditures after the war will amount to 20 billion dollars annually.

Asserting that 75 per cent of United States income is not subject to taxation, which must be controlled to prevent inflation, he advocated a tax on all income, from salaries, bonuses, commissions, dividends and other sources, and a 10 per cent levy on incomes of $500 or more for single persons and $1200 for married persons.

The present view of the Treasury Department, Alvord declared, is that the Government feels it owns 100 per cent of your income, and that what it leaves you is done so through "grace and kindness."

Columnist Constantine Brown, in his address, praised the unbelievable strides that have been made in the Army and Navy since Pearl Harbor. He added that our soldiers today could more than hold their own against any enemy, and that their spirit could not be mtched by the Army of 1917-18. A "do-or-die" spirit could not be matched by the and no army can do what ours is doing now.

Addison Is Praised

At the conclusion of the meeting, Chairman Reilly introduced D. J. Needham, general counsel of the American Bankers Association. He highly praised the efforts of Francis G. Addison, jr., chairman of the law and legislative committee of the District association, in appearing at many congressional hearings during the past year.

The afternoon enteranment program was devoted to golf. Wives of members competed in the "Eleanor Patterson Cup" and a putting contest, while the men participated in four tournaments and horseshoe pitching for the "Gruver Cup."

The final session today, with A. Scott Offut, second vice president presiding, calls for addresses by John M. Christie, president, Washington Chapter, American Institute of Banking, and the Rev. John J. Reilly, director of the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception, whose topic will be "No Funds;" and presentation of resolutions without debate.

Following a recess, new officers of the association and officers of the American Bankers Association will be elected.

A "family dinner" at the Mayflower Hotel tonight, when more than 400 guests are expected, will conclude the convention.

'Exorbitant War Profits' Belied In Survey of Naval Contracts

By the Associated Press

Chicago, May 26—The National Association of Manufacturers has analyzed 1907 completed naval contracts to assemble data which, it claims, discredits beliefs that industry has been "reaping exorbitant profits" on war work.

Profit margins on gross business were narrower since 1930 than in the preceding decade, chiefly because of the growing "tax burden," the report said, and it appears probable net profits "reached their wartime peak during 1941 and are likely to recede in the future."

The study said the House Naval Affairs Committee had issued a report which "led many to believe thta the majority of contractors are reaping exorbitant profits."

The association said under the defense and war production programs net profits before taxes had risen largely because increased volume had reduced overhead costs per unit, but direct costs, especially taxes, wages and raw materials, had been cutting into net profit margins.

"Increased labor cost since 1940 have not been offset by increased output per worker," the report stated. A breakdown of contracts produced these figures:

Of 1013 general contracts, the median profit was 6.9 per cent of cost but probably would be reduced to about 3.4 per cent after taxes.

Of 717 contracts for aircraft, the median profit was 8 per cent before taxes or an estimated 4 per cent after taxes.

Of 115 ordnance contracts the median profit was 7 per cent of cost, but taxes would cut this to about 3.5 per cent.

Of 62 contracts for naval vessels, the median profit was 4.9 per cent but probable taxes would reduce it to 2.9 per cent.

The survey expressed opposition to any arbitrary limit on profits but advocates "maximum" excess profit taxation as propsed by the House Ways and Means Committee.

New Security Issues Slump During Month

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, May 26.—New issues of securities offered for cash during March dropped to 709 million dollars, the lowest amount since last November, the Securities and Exchange Commission reported today.

The shrinkage, the commission said, was "primarily due to the absence of borrowing in the market by the Government except for Treasury bills, which are not included here, and the decrease in sales of war savings bonds to the lowest level since December."

New corporate offerings totaled 102 million dollars, compared with 78 millions in February and 168 millions in January. The first quarter flotations of 344 millions was less than any quarter since the first quarter of 1939.

Public utility issues comprised 49 million dollars of March flotations, chiefly in a $32,500,000 first-mortgage issue by the Pennsylvania Electric Co. Industrial companies marketed 47 million dollars worth of securities, while the remainder of corporate offerings was made up of six million dollars of railroad obligations.

The commission said a moderate decline has been shown so far this year in the percentage in the privately placed corporate bond issues. Approximately one-fourth of corporate bonds have been privately placed to date, compared with averages ranging from 28 to 35 per cent during the last four years.

Of estimated net proceeds from corporate flotations, the SEC said, new money purposes absorbed 39 million dollars, plant and equipment accounted for 25 millions and four millions were added to working capital.

A. C. & F. Protests Ban on Dividend

Trenton, N. J., May 26 (AP).—The American Car & Foundry Co. asked the New Jersey Court of Errors and Appeals today to invalidate an injunction tying up payment of more than $500,000 in dividends to holders of common stock.

Counsel for the New Jersey corporation, whose registered office is in Jersey City, contended Vice Chancellor Henry T. Kays erred in ruling that a $1 a share dividend ordered by the company's directors for October 1, 1941, was unjustified in that it was contrary to the rights of preferred stock owners.

The protested injunction was obtained by Oscar B. Cintos of Havana, Cuba, owner of 2500 shares of preferred stock with an aggegate par value of $250,000. Cintos contended the common stock dividend would have been paid from funds against which preferred stockholders had first call.

A. R. M. Votes Dividend

Middletown, Ohio, May 26 (AP).—Directors of the American Rolling Mill Co. today authorized payment of a quarterly preferred dividend of $1.12½ July 15 to stockholders of record June 15.

U. S. Finding New Sources of Raw Materials

By the Associated Press

New York, May 26.—American ingenuitysis gradually freeing the country from dependence on certain raw materials usually obtained from areas now controlled by the Japanese, George S. Brady of the office of imports, Board of Economic Warfare, told the National Association of Purchasing Agents today.

"The chemical industry during the past year has been outstanding with new and substitute materials," Brady, chief of the board's materials statistics division, said. "Out of the common resin in turpentine we now have a series of synthetic resins that do a good job of replacement of the various varnish gums and resins that the Japs too kfrom us in the Far East.

"We are now independent of the camphor and menthol from Japan. Far Eastern tung oil no longer causes us any worry. Practically every natural perfume oil that we formerly got from the Far East has now been replaced with a synthetic.

Brady said, however, not to "expect too much from synthetic rubber."

It is better than natural rubber for certain uses but it will not replace natural rubber completely," he said. "Alternate natural rubbers such as guayule and chrysil have good possibilities."

In his opinion, Brady said, "before we eare through with the present effort, we will be using aluminum and magnesium as substitutes for other metals, even in ships."

Chicago, May 26 (AP).—A special meeting of business leaders and the National Association of Better Business Bureaus will be held in New York on June 10 and 11 to discuss advertising practices, Kenneth Barnard, chairman of the war activities committee of the association, said today.

Purpose of the meeting, Barnard said, "will be to draft voluntary standards of advertising practice, the effect of which should result in correction of any advertising offers now inconsistent with provisions of the Government's credit regulations.

New York, May 26 (AP).—Sales of Allied Stores Corporation in the first three months of 1942 were 20 per cent above last year but there has been a substantial letdown in volume thus far in May, B. Earl Puckett, president, told stockholders at the annual meeting.

A net profit of $1,597,595 before Federal income and excess profits taxes was shown in the three months ended April 30, 1942, against $462,211 in the like months of 1941.

Refinancing Of V.P.S. Gets SEC Sanction

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, May 26.—The Securities and Exchange Commission approved today in a 3-2 decision a $36,500,000 refinancing program of the Virginia Public Service Co. because "in view of uncertain conditions arising out of the war, we do not desire in any way to delay the proposed refinancing."

The two dissenting commissioners, Chairman Ganson Purcell and Robert H. O'Brien, however, decleared: ". . . . It seems to us to be speculation on the part of the majority when they say they do not wish to delay the refinancing in view of uncertain conditions brought about by the war. This can only mean that adverse market changes might make it more difficult for Virginia Public Service Co. to refund its debt. On the other hand —and it is anybody's guess—it might become easier for the Virginia to refund its debt at some time other than the immediate present. In any event, such an argument seems to us to have no standing in the statute (Holding Company Act) we are charged to administer. Indeed, on several occasions the same argument has been rejected by this commssion."

The dissenting opinion noted that since the company conducts its utility business "in areas of vital importance to the war effort," action "to remedy the company's whole financial structure is essential to the protection of investors and consumers."

"It is demanded by the needs of the Nation. Such action must be prompt. Even more important, it must be right—so far as human action can be right. Congress has charged our commission with the duty to examine this program. In applying the law, we must use our most informed and considered judgment."

The refinancing involves the issuance of 26 million dollars of 3¾ per cent first mortgage bonds, due in 1972, and $10,500,000 of 5 per cent sinking fund debentures, due in 1957. The company yesterday asked bids on the issue.

The SEC instituted proceedings last year against the company under the so-called "death sentence" clauses of the Holding Company Act.

Prosperity Note

New York, May 26 (AP).—Possibly because of war-born prosperity or as a sidelight to the increasing birth rate, sales of expensive cigars—those costing 20 cents or more—jumped to 411,515 in April, up 64 per cent, compared with the same month last year, the Cigar Institute of America reported today.

3½% Rate Approved On Farm Mortgages

By the Associated Press

Legislation extending for another two years the 3½ per cent interest rate on farm mortgages made by Federal Land Banks through National Farm loan Associations was passed by the House and sent to the Senate yesterday.

Action came on voice vote after several members from farm areas contended the rate should be lowered, contending that merchants who sell farm products are able to borrow money more cheaply.

At almost the same time the Senate passed and sent the House legislation which would extend until July 1, 1946, the authority of the Land Bank commissioner to make loans on behalf of the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation.

The measure would also raise the maximum amount of such loans from $7500 to $50,000, except that special approval of the commissioner would be required for any loan of more than $25,000, and preference would be given to applications for loans of $10,000 or less.

New York Cotton

New York, May 26 (AP).—The cotton futures market today came out of an early decline to score final net gains of 50 to 80 cents a bale.

Buying broadened in the late trading on the disclosure that the Commodity Credit Corp. had accepted bids for the purchase of only 125,241 bales of cotton under the May allotment. The trade had looked for much heavier allotments.

General List Drifts Irregularly Higher; Aviation and Industrial Issues Buoyant

New York, May 26.—Buying of aviation and blue chip industrial stocks gave the market a recovery tinge today, although many leaders faltered after a forenoon upswing. Prices were best in the first hour when improvement ranged from fractions to more than two points. Activity picked up for a while, but tapered later, along with prices. Closing trends were a bit uneven.

Selective buying was attributed mainly to the disclosure that an important United States war mission had arrived in London. Wall Street, consequently, did a little short covering or bought for speculative and investment accounts on the idea a new smash at the Axis powers was in the offing. Bullishness chilled here and there before the session was concluded as bulletins from Chinese and Russian fronts were far from cheerful.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks managed to hold a net gain of .1 of a point at 34.2. Transfers of 284,930 shares compared with 233,270 the day before.

Douglas Aircraft was up 2½ on restricted volume as this company indicated new peaks for employment, payrolls and production were being established. Lesser advances were retained by Boeing, Glenn Martin, Sperry, Eastern Air Lines, American Airlines, American Telephone, Standard Oil (N. J.), Woolworth, Westinghouse, Eastman Kodak and J. C. Penney.

Commonwealth & Southern preferred dropped 3¾ points to a new year's bottom just before the final gong when directors announced they had taken no action on the dividend. Todd Shipyards, on the curb, also lost 3½ points when the dividend was cut from $1.50 paid in March to 50 cents.

Rails, steels, motors and coppers did little or nothing. In arrears were du Pont, Youngstown Sheet, Montgomery Ward, Sears Roebuck, General Electric, International Harvester and Union Carbide. New York Central slipped ⅛ to 6⅞, a new record low.

Carriers failed to resound to a batch of good four-months' earnings statements.

Bonds were narrow. Among commodities cotton, down most of the time, revived at the last and finished up 50 to 80 cents a bale. At Chicago wheat and corn were unchanged to up ¼ and off ¼ of a cent a bushel, respectively. Hogs were 5 to 10 cents lower.

A shade higher in the Curb were American Cyanamid, McWilliams Dredging, Sunray Oil, Pantepec, Pittsburgh Plate Glass and Republic Aviation. Fractional declines were posted for Gulf Oil, Humble Oil, American Gas and Glen Alden Coal. Turnover here amounted to 51,060 shares versus 46,345 Monday.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, May 26 (AP).—Wheat futures trading stumbled through a dull, featureless session today, seldom moving far above or below the previous closing levels, while rye and soybeans showed independent firmness to close with net gains for the day.

Grain futures met with an indifferent demand, but there was little pressure to sell and the bulk of trading was described as for local professional accounts. Some traders dubbed the session "a waiting market" with most interests on the sidelines.

Closing prices were mixed. Wheat finished unchanged to ¾ cent lower than Monday, July 1.20¼@1.20⅜, September 1.22¾@1.22⅞; corn unchanged to ¼ higher, July 88⅛@88¾, September 90½; oats off ⅜; rye up ⅜ to ⅝; soybeans ⅝ to ⅞ higher and lard unchanged to 2½ cents higher at the ceiling limits.

T. W. A. to Cut Flights From 46 To 24 a Day

Kansas City, May 26 (AP).—Transcontinental & Western Air, Inc., inaugurates tomorrow a war-time schedule reducing its daily flights from 46 to 24.

The new schedule, resulting from the transfer of additional transport planes to the Army under President Roosevelt's recent order on commercial airlines, will temporarily suspend service between Boulder City, Nev., and Phoenix, Ariz., and between St. Louis and Cincinnati.

Five daily flights between Los Angeles and New York will be maintained. All sleeper service will be suspended, since planes of that type were among those turned over to the Army.

C. & S. Directors Omit Dividend On Senior Stock

New York, May 26 (AP).—Directors of Commonwealth & Southern Corporation, big utility holding company, today took no action on the preferred dividend due at this time. The last payment was 75 cents a share on April 1.

After a directors' meeting held at Wilmington, Del., corporate seat of the firm, the following statement was issued:

"The Commonwealth & Southern Corporation directors resolved that in view of the great uncertainties in the present situation, including the pending tax proposals, the cash needs of subsidiaries for construction for war purposes and the possible results of the order of the Securities and Exchange Commission directing that the corporation be recapitalized into one class of common stock, decided to take no action for the payment of a dividend at this time."

The corporation had accumulated unpaid dividends on the $6 preferred amounting to $21.75 a share after the last payment on April 1. The accumulations began in 1935, when only $3.75 a share was disbursed, and have been growing ever since while $3 annually a share was paid. Earnings in the 12 months ended March equaled $7.98 a share on the preferred, compared with $8.02 a share in the preceding 12 months. For the March quarter earnings amounted to $2.11 a preferred share, against $2.23 last year in the first quarter.

Government to Buy Entire Wholesale Refrigerator Stock

By the Associated Press

All of the 600,000 domestic mechanical refrigerators now frozen in stock of manufacturers and wholesale distributors will be disposed of to the Government, beginning June 15, the War Production Board announced yesterday.

No rationing program is contemplated, WPB emphasized; thus, the only mechanical refrigerators that will be available to ordinary civilians for the duration of the war are those now being sold by retailers. The freeze order does not affect any domestic electrical refrigerators which were in retail stocks at the time the order was issued, February 14.

Retailers are permitted to sell any of these electrical machines which were in stock or in transit at that time. With regard to gas and kerosene refrigerators, which are scarcer, retailers may deliver only those which were fully paid for by the ultimate consumer on February 4, it was announced.

Beginning June 15, manufacturers and distributors will be permitted to fill Army, Navy, Maritime Commission and Panama Canal orders, sell to any FCR agency, or honor WPA special purchase certificates. The latter will be issued only on approval of the National Housing Agency for war housing, the United States Public Health Service, the Board of Economic Warfare for export to Latin America, lend-lease and the Treasury Procurement Division.

The Agriculture Department yesterday offered technical and financial assistance and an insured market to encourage canners and processors to expand vegetable dehydration facilities.

Because of a shortage of tin and other containers and a necessity of conserving transportation space, the Department said greatly increased quantities of dried vegetables were needed.

The department said it would help innterested concerns to obtain priorities for processing materials and would furnish technicians trained in the dehydration processes.

The War Production Board yesterday prohibitted sale or delivery of 14 types of general industrial equipment except on military priority ratings or specific WPB authorization.

The order covers such machinery as passenger and freight elevators; electric motors of more than one horsepower, industrial fans, industrial air washers, stationary steam engines and other types of machinery generally used in industrial operations.

Sale of fence wire, barbed wire, poultry netting, fence posts, gates, staples nd corrugated roofing will be permitted without priority ratings, the War Production Board announced yesterday.

These items were added to nails, bale tires and small pipe on which no priority ratings are required. Officials said the relaxation was ordered since all are constantly used by farmers and householders for maintenance and repair.

15,000 Banks Await Call

Treasury Urged to Outline 'Pattern' for Deficit Financing

By the Associated Press

New York, May 26.—Adrian M. Massie, vice president of the New York Trust., today suggested that the Treasury should outline "some pattern" of financing for that part of the Federal deficit to be financed by the banks.

"This pattern," Massie said in an address before the New York State Bankers Association convention, "should be such that it will have the wholehearted support of the 15,000 commercial banks in the country and at the same time permit the Treasury to have complete flexibility of action."

Massie said the commercial banks would be called upon to use their facilities and their resources to finance that part of the borrowing which cannot be absorbed by the public and the nonbanking corporations.

"It is hoped," Massie added, "that the Treasury will adopt a general pattern for the financing that will permit the banks to set up maturity schedules that will fit into a sound policy—say 1 to 10 years.

E. H. Weaver, chief of the nonmetal section of the conservation and substitution branch of the War Production Board, declared it necessary to "soft pedal" the Government's waste paper salvage campaign because more stock was now being stored than could be used.

Robert W. Sparks, national field director of the Treasury department's war savings stamps campaign, said that if the War Bond sales quota were reached this month and in June and July, it would sound the "death note" on the subject of compulsory savings.

Sparks, in an address before the bankers said:

"Although we have several days to go before reaching the end of the month, current sales indicate that the first quota to be used in the war saving- plan, $600,000,000 for the month of May, will be achieved and possibly with a small excess."

If the $800,000,000 June quota and the $1,000,000,000 per month quota from July on are met, Sparks said, "we will be showing a national rate of participation on a voluntary basis which would be far in excess of any amount indicated by the advocates of a compulsory savings system."

Pointing out that there are approximately 50,500,000 income earners in this country, Sparks said the average rate of participation in the war bond plan per individual is a little better than 5 per cent of salary at the present time.

"National income is now in excess of $120,000,000,000 a year," Sparks said. "If we succeed in this 10 per cent income goal, we will automatically succeed in our quota of $1,000,000,000 a month from July on."

Sparks paid tribute to the Nation's banks, asserting that about 85 per cent of the dollar value of all bond sales has been handled by them without compensation or subsidization from the Government.

He said no fewer than 20,000 bank employes were devoting their full time in the banks to selling and issuing war saving bonds.

U. S. Industry Seen Attaining 'Victory Pace'

By the Associated Press

Chicago, May 26.—American mill and factory executives were told tonight that industry has swung into the stride of victory and that they may enjoy a great prosperity in the wake of the war.

William P. Witherow, president of the National Association of Manufacturers, asserted that "in five short months, under the capable leadership of Donald M. Nelson this country has hit the victory pace, and is putting the tools of warfare into the hands of our fighting men on a scale which makes victory certain."

Slump, Then Prosperity

Murray Shields, economist of the Irving Trust Co., New York, said that "there is much to support the optimistic view that after the post-war readjustment slump is out of the way, we probably will enter a period marked by an increasing standard of living, active and expanding industries and perhaps a really great prosperity."

Both outlined their views in addresses prepared for a meeting sponsored by the National and Illinois Manufacturers Associations.

Witherow reported that an Oregon shipyard completed a ship from "keel to captain" in 60 days, that a new process now being developed would facilitate construction of a cargo ship in 45 days, and that he left the West Coast "mumbling superlatives."

He related that newsmen touring war plants under the auspices of the association were describing the "miracle of the factory front."

"These correspondents have seen battleships being produced a year ahead of schedule, great oil tankers being built in one week. The great automobile industry converted to full war production in three months," he added.

New Records Set

Witherow said 60,000 airplanes by January, 1943, "is no longer talk," that we already are exceeding the Axis in tank output, that steel mills are making new records daily and that the machine tool industry's production is 7½ times its normal volume.

He promised that industry would turn out "more and more for the crisis ahead" but urged that the closed shop and its various modifications be frozen in status quo for the duration, opposed "revolutionary experiments in putting labor into management," and questioned the wisdom o fthe 40-hour week.

Shields, looking ahead to the postwar period, said costly economic errors of the past probably would be repeated, that the Government likely would "free the enterprise system from the obstructions which held it down for the past decade," that there would be a backed-up demand for goods and a flood of new products.

He figured that the postwar decade would see development of freight transportation by air, "practical" television, reequipment of railroads, an unprecedented housing boom, a wealth of new synthetics, new types of metallic alloys, expansion in the plastics fields and new farm products for industrial use.

Listen! with Glynn

Nadine Conner, Metropolitan Opera soprano, is now heard regularly with Nelson Eddy on his weekly "New Old Gold Program" which you hear over WJSV and the Columbia Network at 8 p.m. Wednesdays.

It's a microphone reunion for these two popular singers, who were teamed over the air back in 1937—before Miss Conner had risen to the status of an opera star. A native of California—she was born in San Juan Capistrano, in the house built by her great-grandfather in 1850—the titian-haired soprano received her early music and microphone training on the Pacific Coast.

But it was only in the past season that Nadine Conner reached the goal aspired to by all students of serious music—that is vocal students—when she sang in Mozart's "The Magic Flute" at the Metropolitan Opera.

Her voice is already a familiar one to C. B. S. listeners. Just this spring she sang the leading role in the world premiere of Randall Thompson's opera, "Solomon and Balkis," which you heard over C. B. S., and she has appeared a number of times as soloist with Andre Kostelanetz on his Sunday afternoon programs.

Instrumental accompaniment for Nelson Eddy and Nadine Conner on their Wednesday evening program is provided by Robert Armbruster's Orchestra, with a choral background.

Contract Bridge

"These two hands are remarkable in that they occurred in the same rubber in a family game and that my partner (a visitor from Boston) and I bid six hearts on each, making six or one and seven on the other, although I held no hearts in either hand," writes R. A. J., jr.

"The bidding is normal and the play is obvious," he continues, "but we felt that this was a coincidence of the first rank."

Here is the first hand; neither side was vulnerable, North and South had a part score of 90 points and East was dealer:

	♠ 8 ♡ A K J 10 8 6 5 ◇ A 9 8 3 ♣ 9
♠ 4 3 ♡ Q 9 3 2 ◇ 10 8 2 ♣ Q 7 5 4 3	NORTH WEST EAST SOUTH	♠ K J 9 6 2 ♡ 9 7 4 ◇ 7 6 ♣ J 10 6
	♠ A Q 10 7 5 ♡ None ◇ K Q J 4 ♣ A K 8 2

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
Pass	1 ♠	Pass	2 ♡
Pass	4 ◇	Pass	4 NT
Pass	5 ♡	Pass	5 NT
Pass	6 ♡	Pass	Pass
Pass

North makes six hearts without trouble, being forced to give up one trick to the guarded trump queen.

"A few minutes later," says our friend, "this hand was dealt: North-South vulnerable, no part score and North dealer:

	♠ K ♡ A K Q J 10 8 6 5 2 ◇ None ♣ A 6 3
♠ 8 6 ♡ 9 7 3 ◇ A K Q 10 5 ♣ Q 9 2	NORTH WEST EAST SOUTH	♠ Q J 9 5 2 ♡ 4 ◇ J 9 7 6 3 2 ♣ 6
	♠ A 10 7 4 3 ♡ None ◇ 8 4 ♣ K J 10 7 5 4

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
4 NT	5 ◇	Dble	Pass
6 ♡	Pass	Pass	Pass

Declarer takes all 13 tricks easily. He wins the opening lead, draws the outstanding trumps, unblocks by playing the king of spades, enters dummy with a club and cashes the spade ace, on which he discards a club from the closed hand.

Not the only coincidence about these two hands is that they were both played at hearts with one of the partners void in trumps. Each offered a grand slam to players daring enough to bid it. The first hand manages 13 tricks with diamonds as trumps; all declarer has to do is to ruff one low heart in his hand, then dummy's cards are high. North would have done better to indicate his diamond support—the grand slam could have been reached easily.

In the second hand 13 tricks can be counted from the start. Perhaps the interference of the adversaries is to blame for the failure to reach this one, but an overcall by North in the opponents' suits, diamonds, would certainly have helped.

Brinkley, 'Goat Gland Doctor' Of Radio Fame, Dies in Sleep

San Antonio, Tex., May 26 (AP).—The persuasive radio voice of Dr. John Richard Brinkley, which brought him fabulous wealth as a medical practioner and lifted him to power in Kansas politics, was silenced by death today.

The 56-year-old surgeon, popularly known as "The Goat-Gland Doctor," died in his sleep, shorn of his once-vast fortune and pursued to the last by litigation which started back in 1930 when the Kansas State Medical Board revoked his license to practice.

Gone were his three yachts, the powerful radio stations and the income he once estimated at more than a million dollars a year. However, the goateed gland surgeon, who brought and lost a suit against Dr. Morris Fishbein, of the American Medical Association, for calling him a "charlatan and a quack," clung to his palatial home on the Rio Grande at Del Rio and to life insurance policies he valued at $350,900.

Ill For Months

At his bedside when he died were his wife, the former Miss Minnie T. Jones, and their son, John R. Brinkley 3d, 15. Death came from heart disease. Dr. Brinkley had been gravely ill for months.

Last September he was indicted in Federal Court at Little Rock in connection with the alleged offering through the mails of his sex-rejuvenation and life-lengthening treatments. Last year he brought his petition for voluntary bankruptcy into Federal Court at Del Rio. When the petition was granted he listed, but did not formally admit, debts of $1,118,064.50 and assets of $315,500.

The Radio Voice, giving medical advice and advocating glandular transplantations for persons who had lost their vigor, had its first trials from Milford, Kans. There Dr. Brinkley founded his first hospital in 1923.

Nearly Became Governor

At the peak of his career, when powerful stations from below the Rio Grande carried Brinkley broadcasts as far as the Canadian border, he employed 50 secretaries to handle his fan mail of 50,000 letters a day.

Twice his voice carried him close to the Governorship of Kansas. After the revocation of his license in 1930, Brinkley utilized the radio, sound trucks and the airplane in an amazing write-in campaign that brought him only 35,000 votes less than the successful candidate, Harry Woodring. Two years later, he increased his vote, but again lost by 35,000.

Lions Club today at 12:30 in the Westminster Building, Prince and St. Asaph Streets. He will discuss proposals to return nearby Virginia territory to the District and the steps taken by Alexandria and Arlington civic groups to combat them.

The speaker will be introduced by Armistead L. Boothe, program chairman for the current month. Dr. Nathan G. Schuman will preside.

At the business session, the report of the nominating committee, headed by John P. Strauss, will be presented, and nominations also will be accepted from the floor in preparation for the June election meeting.

Auto Victim Succumbs In Frederick Hospital

Frederick, Md., May 26 (AP).—John Shilling, 33, who was injured May 18 when he was struck by a motor horse-van on Route No. 340, died at Frederick Hospital today, never having regained consciousness.

Corpl. M. M. Puncke of the State police said Shilling was walking along the highway when the accident occurred. Puncke arrested Harry L. Norris of Gittings, Md., on charges of driving with an expired chauffeur's license.

Discrimination

8 Concerns Must Cease Racial Bias

Washington Bureau of Chicago Sun

The President's Fair Employment Practices Committee yesterday found eight New Jersey and New York firms had discriminated against workers on account of their race, creed, color or national origin.

The committee ordered the companies, all engaged in war production, to disregard all such factors in employment of future applicants for work, to submit monthly reports of employment of new workers, and to advise all employment agencies with which the firms do business that applicants will be accepted without discrimination.

The firms involved include six in New Jersey—the Wright Aeronautical Corporation, Paterson; Becton, Dickinson & Co., East Rutherford; Babcock & Wilcox Co., Bayonne; the Titeflex Metal Hose Co., Newark; Continental Can Co., East Rutherford, and Isolantite, Inc., Belleville—and two in New York—Fairchild Aviation Corporation, Jamaica, and Carl Norden, Inc., New York City.

The committee's findings were made after hearings at New York February 16 and 17, under direction of Dr. Malcolm S. McLean, committee chairman.

McLean, in issuing the findings, warned all war industries against use of advertisements which call for "white," "Protestant," or "gentile" workers.

"These advertisements indicate several needed worker groups are discriminated against at a time when we must have unity of brain, brawn and loyalty to defeat our common enemies from without," he said.

New York Cleric Offers Prayers at Opening Session of House

For the first time in the history of the country, an orthodox Jewish rabbi yesterday invoked God's blessing on an opening session of the House of Representatives.

He was Rabbi Bernard Bergman, spiritual director of the Home of the Sons and Daughters of Israel in New York City, who appeared before the Representatives garbed in the traditional robes of his faith. He gave an English rendition of a Hebrew prayer he composed for the occasion.

He urged that the Nation's leaders be granted wisdom and foresight to navigate the ship of state "amidst the sundry obstructions and obstacles besetting our path."

Rabbi Bergman's appearance was arranged by Representative Arthur G. Klein (Democrat) of New York. The rabbi was introduced by House Speaker Sam Rayburn.

Meanwhile, the Rev. Dr. Ulysses G. Pierce, pastor of All Souls' Unitarian Church, was offering the morning prayers in the Senate chamber, where he was chaplain during the Taft administration.

He was one of the local clergymen serving as guest chaplains since the death of the Very Rev. ZeBarney T. Phillips on May 10.

It is probable that the new chaplain will be selected from the numbers of guest chaplains appearing daily in the Senate.

The Rev. Armand T. Eyler, rector of St. Margaret's Episcopal Church, led Monday's prayers. Presiding last week were Dr. Howard Hyde Russell, of the Central Ohio Association of Congregational Churches; the Rev. Dr. Frederick Brown Harris, pastor of Foundry Methodist Church, and the Rev. Dr. Howard Stone Anderson, pastor of First Congregational Church and retiring president of the Washington Ministerial Union.

The Rev. Dr. Peter Marshall, Scottish-born pastor of New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, will offer the prayer at tomorrow's opening Senate session.

Md. High Court Hears Appeal on Vending Machines

Annapolis, Md., May 26 (AP).—An appeal by the attorney general's office, asking reversal of a Baltimore Circuit Court decision declaring Maryland's vending machine license law invalid, marked the reconvening today of the State Court of Appeals.

Attorney General William C. Walsh and Hall Hammond, deputy attorney general, charged the lower court erred in nullifying the act, passed by the 1941 Legislature, because Governor O'Conor did not sign it until 26 days after it was scheduled to become effective, May 1, 1941.

Besides declaring the act invalid, Walsh said, the lower court also enjoined the State from requiring the Vendomat Corporation of America and Mills Automatic Merchandising Corp., firms contesting the law, to obtain licenses for vending machines owned or operated by them.

Walsh contended that the act's validity was unchanged despite the signing date, saying, "It was effective May 26, 1941, or certainly on June 1, 1941."

Rev. Mr. Sorrick Reelected Head Of Md. Synod

Gettysburg, Pa., May 26 (AP).—The Rev. Raymond C. Sorrick, pastor of the Messiah Lutheran Church, of Baltimore, was reelected today as president of the Maryland Synod of the United Lutheran Church.

Other officers, also reelected, are the Rev. J. Frank Fife, pastor of the Church of the Holy Comforter, Baltimore, secretary; Virgil W. Doub, Middletown, Md., treasurer, and the Rev. W. G. Minnick of Baltimore, statistical secretary.

Treasurer Doub reported receipts of $139,470 last year, and said that 89 per cent of the amount apportioned by the United Lutheran Church of America to the Maryland Synod for benevolent work was raised, an increase of 5 per cent over the preceding year.

The synod adopted a "forward-looking-policy" for more intensive study of various phases of rural church work.
